PRESIDENT ADDS NEW BILLION TO DEFENSE PLANS

Request Will Go to Congress Today.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
(Picture on page 6.)

Washington, D. C., May 30.—President Roosevelt announced today at a special press conference that he will ask congress for another billion dollars for national defense. He said he will ask funds for modern weapons, for vital reserve supplies, and for training workers to support and supply an American army in the field.

Mr. Roosevelt did not name the exact sum he will ask, except to say the new figure probably will equal the 1 billion 182 million dollars request he gave congress in his special defense message two weeks ago. He probably will send a message to congress tomorrow, leaving it to fill in the amounts.

The original budget figures for defense totaled approximately 2 billion dollars. With the President's double barreled request for added funds, the 1941 defense appropriation will total approximately 4 billion 400 million dollars, more than double that of the current fiscal year ending June 30.

Other Defense Developments.

Other important defense developments of the day were:

1. The advisory commission to the council on national defense, which Mr. Roosevelt named Tuesday to correlate the defense program with the nation's economy, organized in its first meeting at the White House.

2. The house sent the $1,473,756,728 naval appropriation bill, which includes the navy's share of the defense funds asked by the President two weeks ago, to conference with the senate.

3. The house voted 187 to 141 to accept a senate amendment to the war department civil functions bill appropriating 15 million dollars for a third set of locks at the Panama canal as a defense measure.

4. The senate banking and currency committee reported favorably a bill authorizing unlimited RFC loans to build up the nation's arms production capacity. [Details on page 9.]

CCC Training Bill Offered.

5. Senator James F. Byrnes [D., S. C.] introduced a bill authorizing the President to require training of Civilian Conservation corps members in noncombat subjects essential to army and navy operations.

6. The treasury announced it had obtained rights to produce two of the leading types of American airplane engines and the leading English airplane engine. [Details on page 25.]

In announcing he is about to ask congress for more defense funds, Mr. Roosevelt said he is motivated by the turn of world events since he spoke to congress two weeks ago. He said the message will propose appropriation for both the army and navy and congress will fix the definite figures deemed necessary to make the nation secure against attack. It is expected the bulk of the money will go for mechanization, motorization, and modernization of the army.

928 Tanks Contemplated.

The army, it is believed, will ask an increase in its tank forces and strengthened tank defenses. The army has about 350 tanks, of which 28 are modern. The defense expansion program contemplates a total of 928 light and heavy tanks.

One hundred million dollars may go toward training apprentices in the CCC and the national youth administration for the production of war materials and the civil aeronautics authority's pilot training program. This sum would be administered thru the national defense commission.

Mr. Roosevelt announced his new armament plans after an 85 minute organization conference with six of the seven members of the advisory commission on national defense. Sidney Hillman, vice president of the C. I. O. and president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, who is to have charge of employment problems in defense production, was ill in New York and could not attend. Also present were members of the cabinet, congressional leaders, and army and navy officials.

Germans Hint Italy Is Ready to Join in War

BERLIN, May 31, Friday (AP).—Adolf Hitler has summoned Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels to general headquarters in the west to prepare a "sensational announcement," dealing perhaps with Italy's entry into the war, a usually reliable source reported early today.

[Rome offered no official comment, but observers there said they thought it unlikely Mussolini's precise intentions would be known before he strikes.]

Goebbels' summons was a hasty one. The source gave it as his own opinion that the announcement would have to do with Italy's action.

Wary of French Air Force.

The source said he understood that there was an agreement between Hitler and Mussolini that Italy would enter the war only after Hitler has assured Il Duce that the French air force was so demolished as no longer to constitute a threat to Italy's chief industries. Most of these are in the Po valley, in the north of Italy.

Whether this assurance has been forthcoming, now that Germany has won the bloody battle of Flanders and claimed great inroads in the French and British air strength, is a matter of speculation.

Likewise it was not known exactly when the announcement can be expected.

As for manpower, reliable German sources estimated last night that France has but 3,000,000 men left to face 8,000,000 Germans and, possibly, 4,000,000 Italians.

Of the original 4,000,000 Frenchmen under arms, about 1,000,000 were declared either to have been killed, taken prisoner or to be facing annihilation within the next few days in the German pincer movement.

Need 1,000,000 Against Italy.

Of these remaining 3,000,000, German sources estimated that 1,000,000 are needed as possible defenders against Italy. Another 1,000,000 are said to be lined up between the Somme and Aisne rivers protecting Paris. One million are said to be in the Maginot line.

Now that the battle of Flanders is ending in a tempest of death, there is wide speculation concerning a great onslaught on France's Somme-Aisne line, then Paris.

Should Italy enter the war, her position in the south, against France, would be much easier if the French troops were engaged against a great German offensive in the north. Many military observers also believe a deeper plunge into France is necessary for Germany before its forces can directly attack England with the fullest effect.

FRANCE WILL RECRUIT 100 WOMEN PILOTS FOR DUTY WITH AIR SERVICE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 30.—One hundred "feminine auxiliary pilots" are to be recruited by the French air force, according to a decree law published today in the Journal Officiel, government organ. Their service will be restricted to the interior zone, at training camps, and air fields.

Applicants must be at least 20 years old and not more than 40. They must have 300 flying hours to their credit before being placed in the air force. Once accepted, they will have the privileges of second lieutenants, altho they will not rank as officers.

Their pay will be based on the number of flying hours after the first 300 and will vary from $434 to $650 a year [from 24,000 to 36,000 francs].

The engineering corps of the French army also is enlisting feminine auxiliaries for service as nurses, telephone girls, cooks, clerks, sketchers, mechanics, and radio experts.

ALLIED FORCES STRENGTHENED IN MEDITERRANEAN

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, May 30 (AP).—The allied battle fleet in the eastern Mediterranean was joined in practice maneuvers tonight by planes of the British air force in a demonstration of readiness for any new flareup in the European war.

Egypt, meanwhile, speeded her defense preparations. School teachers were organized in special squads to serve as nurses in military hospitals. The aid raid protection bureau asked for funds to finance evacuation of principal cities in case of emergency.

Priceless Egyptian antiquities were moved to secret hiding places.

LONDON, May 30 (AP).—King George granted an audience today to the United States ambassador, Joseph P. Kennedy, in Buckingham palace.

Rumania Votes State Control of All Business

BY SAM BREWER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUCHAREST, Rumania, May 30—The Rumanian government tonight mobilized all industry and trade for the service of the nation with a decree which amounts to state socialism.

A statement issued after the cabinet meeting tonight at which the decree was passed, said, "the minister of economy is given full power to take all measures for the organization, coördination and control of production and consumption of all articles, not only for the army but also for the civilian population."

Decree Covers Foreign Trade.

The measure also covers foreign trade.

The ministry of economy henceforth will work in collaboration with the ministry of defense and the general staff.

This gives the ministers full powers to enforce any regulations for any industry they feel will benefit the nation. They can run all businesses by decree in Rumania's latest effort to see that no step is omitted to keep her out of war or strengthen her if she is plunged into war.

It also was announced today that anybody found discussing the government's policies or foreign war news in public places would be taken immediately before a military court.

Officials said this action would be taken to end unfounded rumors "spread with unhealthy perseverance in public places, cafés, street cars, hotels, and in the street" because of "the depressing effect" of these rumors.

Report Iron Guardists Seized.

The act forbids the spreading of "tendentious rumors on how the internal or foreign policy and foreign military operations are affecting our country."

Also forbidden "are conversations in public on military questions, on events in the military zone where troops are concentrated, and on measures taken by the authorities concerning the order, security, and the transport of men."

The ban on talk about internal security measures apparently is intended to end persistent reports that many members of the former Iron Guard, pro-Nazi organization, have been rearrested and some have been shot.

ENGLAND SENDS ARMY TO HELP SOMME DEFENSE

Trapped Men Fight to Reach Dunkirk.

BULLETIN.

PARIS, May 30.—A second British army has arrived in France and taken up positions "somewhere along the Somme river." Tonight's British-French communique said: "Actions favorable to us are being fought along the greater part of the Somme front."

PARIS, May 30 (AP).—The imperiled French rear guards of the allied northern armies were reported late tonight to be fighting their way, step by step, toward the sea after holding off the Germans to the bitter end in Flanders to permit the mass of their comrades to escape.

Military dispatches said the French troops under Gen. Rene Jacques Adolphe Prioux had abandoned their positions along the south wall of the allied escape corridor and were pushing along the 40 mile road to Dunkirk, where warships and transports are taking aboard the armies of the north.

[German sources claimed Gen. Prioux and his staff have been captured.]

Try to Block Retreat.

The Germans attacked across Flanders halfway between Lille and Dunkirk in an effort to cut off the retreat, but reports late tonight said the rear guard was squeezing thru anyway.

To illustrate the grave peril of the surviving allied armies, a French authority said that they numbered 270,000 men, in 18 divisions, of which 10 were French and 8 were British, against 700,000 Germans—40 infantry divisions and 8 armored columns.

Both flanks of the French path to the sea are now held by British troops, taking their stand in turn behind flooded zones north and south of the fortified portion of Dunkirk.

The ancient swamps south of Dunkirk, from Gravelines to Saint Omer, which had been dried up by modern drainage, once more are a salty bog, covered by waters admitted by flooded canals from the sea. The valley of the Yser, north of Dunkirk, also was flooded from Nieuport to Ypres over a width of more than two miles.

Germans Suffer Air Losses.

The German air force launched violent bombing attacks against the fleeing allies and against the warships at Dunkirk, but was itself suffering heavy losses. The Germans were estimated to have lost nearly 100 planes today alone. German torpedo carrying speedboats swarmed in the English channel.

The late developments indicated the embattled rear guard might still reach the sea despite the German advances on the southern wall of the allied armies of the north.

This wall, extending from Cassel to Gravelines, formed one side of a 40 mile-long corridor of escape running northwest from the region of Lille to Dunkirk—a besieged city manned by French sailors and marines.

Fleets Guard Flight.

The other side was formed by an allied line running from Nieuport to Ypres along the Yser river, and here the French war ministry spokesman declared that the Nazi rush was being held.

While the broken allied battalions which already had reached Dunkirk were being moved across the English channel under cover of the guns of the British and French fleets, others were pouring down the corridor, forcing a bloody passage at points where the Nazi advance guards sought to bar them.

"Now, more than ever, American industrial aid is absolutely necessary," said a spokesman for the ministry of information.

A Pilot Describes His Day; Must Have Been Busy One

LONDON, May 30 (AP).—The pilot of a Royal air force fighting plane turned in this report of his day's work yesterday, says an air ministry bulletin: "Shot down three Nazi fighters and a dive bomber, jumped by parachute from my crippled Hurricane [fighting plane], swam until picked up by a paddle steamer and landed at Margate."

Seize French General with Entire Staff

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, May 30.—Terrific attacks by air, encircling thrusts on land, and merciless shelling today were delivering the final smashing blows to the last of the British expeditionary force and the last of the three French armies battling fiercely to escape Dunkirk and the disastrous battlefields of Flanders.

The German military described the British-French withdrawal toward Dunkirk as a pell-mell retreat and estimated that up to May 29 the British had lost 100,000 dead in the "battle of millions." The Germans acknowledged their own losses also were heavy.

The Germans claimed to have shot down 89 allied planes in a battle over the English channel and to have bombed and hit 60 ships. Three warships and 16 transports loaded with soldiers fleeing to England were reported sunk and the rest of the ships badly damaged.

Fierce Rear Guard Fights.

British and French troops in a coastal pocket were reported fighting furious rear guard actions in an effort to escape thru Dunkirk. The port, which has been burning for days, was under heavy German attack, pounded by a literal rain of shells and bombs.

Germans succeeded in nipping off another end of the pocket when a barrier was shot thru from Cassel, in French Flanders, to Poperinghe, in Belgian Flanders. This pocket is shut off on the southeast by the Germans holding Lille.

Within the pocket, at Steenvoorde, east of Cassel, the Germans yesterday captured the veteran French general, Rene Jacques Adolphe Prioux, with his staff and uncounted hundreds of his troops, they announced.

Commanded 1st Army.

Prioux and his mechanized forces had fought unsuccessfully to hold open the lower end of the allied escape corridor to the sea. Prioux, who is 61 years old, commanded parts of the French 1st army. A German announcement said that the number of prisoners taken with Prioux "cannot yet be estimated, even approximately."

Additional French troops, trapped within another small pocket southeast of Lille, were declared by the high command to be annihilated or laying down their arms, helpless, uncounted.

As the battle of Flanders approached its finale, the prediction was made in authorized quarters that another impending blitzkrieg development would be a revival of a high pressure U-boat drive so that the undersea craft can be relieved from the region of Britain "for more distant waters."

Beset by Two Flying Corps.

Two whole flying corps, artillery, and even the leveled muzzles of anti-aircraft weapons tore at the remnants of the allied boats and men struggling in the sea and along the coast between Dunkirk and Ostend.

The flyers were under the commands of Aviation Generals Baron Wolfram von Richthofen and Gravert. Von Richthofen is a relative of the famous world war ace and was commander of the Condor legion which helped Generalissimo Franco to win the civil war in Spain.

Their bombs wrecked the anchorage locks at Dunkirk, making the harbor useless, and the British rescue ships had to stand out to sea.

After the air battle over the English channel, the Germans claimed

SOLDIERS TELL OF HORRORS ON CHANNEL TRIP

Describe Ferocity of Flanders' Fight.

BULLETIN.

A SOUTHEAST PORT IN ENGLAND, May 31, Friday (AP).—British troops retreating in Flanders "have in almost every case succeeded in blowing up gasoline dumps and leaving nothing useful to the enemy," a returned officer of the expeditionary force declared today.

A SOUTHEAST PORT IN ENGLAND, May 30 (AP).—Thousands of Britain's smashed army of Flanders, staggering with fatigue from the bloody 20 day failure across the channel, landed on home soil tonight. But many others were lost on the narrow stretch of water that was turned into a raging strip of fire.

[Germany yesterday claimed it had sunk 16 troopships and three warships. Britain acknowledged the loss of three destroyers, one small transport, and various auxiliary vessels.]

With the British were many French infantrymen; there were men who told in awe of the might of the German army and air force and of the cheapness with which life was held in the Nazi columns.

In Water for Hours.

Their trip across the channel had been scarcely less punishing than the 20 days spent in ravaged Flanders.

One soldier thus described the embarkation:

"When we were hit (by bombs) we swam ashore, but when the ship didn't go down we swam back to her again to take her out of the harbor. But then she turned turtle and we had to swim again. Some of us were in the water for hours before we were picked up by a British warship."

Telling of suffering continuous air attacks from the very beginning of the Flanders campaign, they all declared it was the great swarms of German planes and the great weight of German numbers that finally pushed them off the Flemish plain.

Swims 7 or 8 Miles.

Hospital ships as well as troopships were targets for the Nazi bombs, they declared.

"Our flyers are magnificent," said one, "but it's volume that we need."

Another, telling of the channel trip, thus described his troubles after his ship had been hit:

"I was very thankful when, after swimming 7 or 8 miles, I was able to get hold of a table. Another fellow and I sat on it until we were picked up. All of us were almost naked. We have had no food since yesterday at midday and no sleep for three days."

Five Belgian officers in the party declared they were astounded when the order came for the Belgian army to cease fighting.

Refuses to Yield Gun.

One Belgian, speaking of King Leopold's capitulation, said:

"I was asked to hand over my revolver. I immediately refused and, with my companions, I made for the coast and finally we reached the British and French. We do not intend to stop fighting on orders of Leopold—and there are thousands of other Belgian soldiers of the same opinion."

With uniforms stained and shredded, the troops were a battle scarred lot.

Typical was a heavy fellow with several days' growth of beard. He gave a tired grin and said:

"We've had a terrible time this 'ere last fortnight . . . swimming canals . . . nights without sleep . . . bombings.

"Fifty or more German planes would sail over and drop their bombs. Just as were getting over that, here would come 50 more, and so on, in relays."

A British artillery sergeant declared:

"We have been bombed night and day until we have got really used to it. The Germans are poor shots and our casualties have not been heavy, altho they rained bombs on us.

"Their airmen are no match for the Royal Air force and they know it. Yesterday we watched one British pilot take on seven machines and bring down three of them. The German airmen seem to concentrate their attacks with dive bombers, then come down low and let go with machine guns."

Says It's Not Fair Fight.

A noncommissioned officer said:

"It's not been a fair fight yet. Our infantry has not had a real chance to come to grips. The Germans have no heart for meeting us in fair and square infantry attacks."

A sergeant major asserted:

"Altho we have come back wounded we have given them plenty to remember us by. At times the slaughter was wholesale. Column after column [of Germans] was mowed down by our machine guns. The morale of our men was superb. When they were embarking bombers raided the ships and one [ship's] gun crew was put out of action. Wounded men went to take a share in feeding the guns."

A Bloodstained Doll.

A trooper carried a bloodstained cloth doll as a present for his young daughter; it had been blown out of a toy shop window in a Belgian town by a bomb, he said. The blood was his own.

A Glasgow soldier said the wounded men "lived like rabbits in the sand dunes" of the channel coast until the navy "came along and did a grand job."

Seaman A. B. Bradley said that when the whale boats of his rescue ship were sent ashore to look for the British troops, the men came out wading up to their necks in the water.

Shortly afterward German planes swooped down and the rescue work was carried out in a hail of bombs.

"On our way home, however, we got some revenge," Bradley said. "Our gunners brought down five Dornier flying boats."

British Bombers Active.

Another Tommy exclaimed:

"I never believed anything like the wall of fire our ships put up to screen troops was possible. British planes, too, dropped bombs like hail on the Germans."

An army officer said "Our losses in the last few days have been far less than might be expected, but the slaughter among the Germans has been incredible."

One of the men said Belgium was overrun with spies. "Each time we changed positions we were bombed by enemy planes shortly thereafter," he declared.

Most of the soldiers were so tired they fell asleep as soon as they reached the special trains pulled onto the piers to take them off the transports. Others sang, shouted, and waved as they took places in trains and motor buses.

BRITAIN TO KEEP DOG RACING; NEED SPORT TO RELAX

LONDON, May 30. (AP).—Sir John Anderson, minister for home security, told a questioner in commons today that England would not ban greyhound racing during the war—because hard-pressed workers needed such relaxation.

American-born Lady Astor commented:

"Does he know how shocked the men who have been fighting are? I have seen some of them coming home and they have been horrified."

NAZIS ISSUE NEW THREAT TO SAVE LIVES OF AIRMEN

BERLIN, May 30 (AP).—German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop notified the French government today that Germany would retaliate with blood for blood in any instances of mistreatment of captured Nazi airmen or parachute troops.

The statement, sent to Sweden for relay to Paris, gave instances from reports Von Ribbentrop said he had received that "members of German air forces and parachute troops made prisoners by the French are meeting with treatment in utter contrast to the regulations of international law and treaties in force. . . ." He said Germany "will henceforth treat members of the French air force falling into German hands exactly according to the French example."

At the same time, DNB, the official German news agency, declared the German high command had received information that Germans captured by the British "are treated as if they were murderers or cannibals, insulted terribly, and threatened with death. . . . Germany will not allow these crimes to remain unpunished," DNB stated.

SWEDISH AVIATOR IN OCEAN FLIGHT KILLED BY BLAST

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, May 30 (AP).—Kurt Bjorkvall, Swedish pilot who was forced down in the Atlantic in an attempted flight from New York to Stockholm in 1936 after he had left behind a greatly disappointed Swedish baroness, was killed with three others today in an explosion in a hangar.

Bjorkvall, who was 35 years old, was a volunteer in Finland's defense against the Russian invasion.

He and the Baroness Eva von Blixen-Finecke were scheduled to make the 1936 flight together but at the last minute he announced he had arranged with the sponsors to buy sole rights to the plane and make the jump alone.

FAME OR SHAME, WAR'S FORTUNE DECIDES FATE

One General a Hero, Other in Disgrace.

BY HENRY C. CASSIDY.

PARIS, May 30 (AP).—A strange twist in the fortunes of war has taken two of France's finest generals in the field and made one a hero and the other a disgraced man.

Gen. Blanchard.

The hero is Gen. Georges Blanchard, whose army fought a losing battle against the Germans in Flanders after King Leopold's surrender of the Belgian forces.

The one in disgrace is Gen. Andre Corap, whose army was broken by the Germans May 15 in the battle of the Meuse, opening France to invasion and the German rush to the English channel.

Roles First Made Public.

These two are the first of the active French commanders in the field whose parts in the war have been made public here. Berlin reports also have told of the capture of Gen. Henri Giraud by the Germans.

I knew Blanchard and Corap early in the war when their armies were holding sectors side by side on the Belgian border.

Corap, who is rotund in shape and bluff in manner, was more the hero type. His headquarters was in a hunting lodge in the Ardennes mountains and was decorated with scowling boars' heads, spreading antlers, and other trophies.

He talked volubly of his campaigns in Africa and his capture of Abd-El-Krim in 1926 during the Riff war.

"I talked to Abd-El-Krim like a child and told him a country like his, which dated from yesterday, should never try to make war against a nation like France, which dates back centuries," Corap said.

"Some day you may be telling Hitler the same thing," a young staff officer interjected, and Corap nodded.

Gen. Blanchard Studious Type.

Blanchard, who is tall, dark and serious in manner, seemed more the studious type. His headquarters were in the schoolhouse of a northern industrial town. Maps and documents were spread across tables and on walls.

He talked soberly of the complicated defenses of his sector, with its pillbox line and inundation zone.

Before the war Blanchard had been director of the center for high military studies, where he succeeded Gen. Maxime Weygand, the new allied generalissimo.

When Germany invaded the Low Countries May 10 the armies of Corap and Blanchard went into action together.

Offensive Breaks Army.

Corap's army swung along the Meuse valley, took the full blast of the German offensive, and broke.

Premier Paul Reynaud announced to the chamber of deputies May 21 the complete disorganization of Corap's forces.

Blanchard's army marched into Belgium, was ordered to retreat May 15, and was cut off by the Germans.

Since then Corap has fallen into the oblivion of defeated warriors and Blanchard has become France's first great hero of the war.

ENGLAND ADMITS 3 WARSHIPS SUNK COVERING FLIGHT

Allies Continue Battle on Coast of Flanders.

BY JOSEPH CERUTTI.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 30.—The great British retreat from Flanders already has cost the navy three destroyers and a number of auxiliary vessels, it was acknowledged tonight. In addition, the loss of one small troop transport was admitted.

The destroyers sunk by the Germans were the Grafton, Grenade, and the Wakeful. The transport lost was the Abukir, of 689 tons. The auxiliary vessels sunk were not named. The admiralty denied German claims that greater losses than these had been suffered.

[The Germans said their planes had sunk 16 transports and 3 warships.]

As weary and wounded British troops continued to be landed by the thousands at southeast coast ports tonight, the battle along the coast of Flanders across the channel raged on, the remaining allied troops fighting to protect their retreat. These troops were subjected to a constant storm of German shellfire and bombing.

Retreat with Skill and Daring.

The first official news that withdrawal operations were under way was contained in a ministry of information communique announcing that "in view of increased German pressure the northern and southern flanks of the British expeditionary force and French forces in the north have been forced to fall back toward the coast, where the battle now is raging. The withdrawal has been carried out with great skill and daring."

The retreat was facilitated by the heroic stand at Calais of the small British force sent to France last week to maintain communications. This force, which arrived just in time to find that the main body of British troops was withdrawing toward Dunkirk, proved "of invaluable assistance" in the retreat, the communique said.

"This action," it continued, "will count among the most heroic deeds in the annals of the British army."

Says 77 Planes Downed.

The communique did not say exactly what happened to this small force, but mentioned that "its refusal to surrender Calais until it contained a large number of the enemy" was accomplished "in spite of repeated attacks and of continuous air and artillery bombardment."

The air ministry, in reporting on yesterday's activity, said that 77 German planes had been shot down by the royal air force. A single squadron of 12 British Defiant fighting planes accounted for 37 German planes, the air ministry said.

BRITISH WOMEN SUFFER IN WAR IN FLANDERS, TOO

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 30.—Many British women have been sharing the hardships of the war in Flanders right along with the British expeditionary force, it was disclosed today.

The plight of one group working in a Salvation Army station which was blown up by bombs was described by Mrs. Rose Fleming, a member of the staff, upon her arrival in London from Calais. "In the last fortnight," she said, "we never had our clothes off. There was no shortage of food and we were able to get it distributed despite the air raids. We slept, when we could, in the cellar."

With other women workers Mrs. Fleming left Calais on a cargo boat which took nine hours to cross the channel to Folkestone. "German planes attacked us," Mrs. Fleming said, "but British planes beat them off."

BRITAIN DECREES SUPPRESSION OF ANTIWAR PAPERS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 30.—The power to shut down without warning any newspaper opposing war was conferred tonight on Minister of Home Security Sir John Anderson.

The regulation provides that if any newspaper systematically publishes matter "calculated to foment opposition to the war," Anderson may forbid its publication. He also is empowered to shut down or dispose of at his own discretion any press used in the production of the offending literature or newspaper.

The regulation was hailed by progovernment newspapers as a blow against the fifth column press of this country. A sweeping cleanup of antiwar and peace organization publications seemed imminent.

Nazis Place Rule of Dutch in Seyss-Inquart's Hands

BERLIN, May 30 (AP).—With virtually all Belgium now in Nazi hands, the Germans today announced settlement of their administration of The Netherlands, with civil authority in the hands of Arthur Seyss-Inquart, minister without portfolio, and military authority entrusted to Aviation General Friedrich Christiansen.

MILLIONS TO GO FOR PROTECTIVE NETS IN HARBORS

Washington, D. C., May 30 (AP).—Congress learned today that a substantial part of the navy's share of emergency defense funds will go to protect 24 of the nation's principal harbors from submarine attacks and for the purchase of a new type of aircraft cannon.

Adm. W. R. Furlong.

The information came with publication of testimony of naval officers at committee hearings on the $1,475,000,000 naval supply bill preparatory to sending the measure to a joint senate-house conference committee.

Rear Admiral W. R. Furlong, chief of the bureau of ordnance, said the navy planned to spend $27,500,000 for antisubmarine nets for harbors and fleet anchorages. Eight million dollars more was asked for the acquisition of 20 special type boats to serve as net tenders.

Furlong testified that the army and navy were buying for $400,000 the patent rights to France's new Hispano-Suiza-Burket 20 millimeter aircraft gun and that it was planned to put 2,000 of them in new warplanes.

TAKE ADDITIONAL DEFENSE STEPS FOR HONGKONG

HONGKONG, May 30 (AP).—Precautions to safeguard Hongkong if powers likely to menace its security enter the war—considered a possibility if the allies are beaten in Europe—were tightened today. [Possible Japanese action is the main British worry in the far east.]

Maj. Gen. Arthur Grasset, commanding British troops in China, informed the legislative council that auxiliary forces would be organized. The age limit for combatant group volunteers will be raised from 41 to 46. Grasset said all reserves must be retained here for defense of the colony and that "for the present there is no question of permitting any one to go home to fight."

ALLIES UTILIZE LAND BULWARKS IN DEFENSE LINES

Terrain Offers Obstacles to Nazi Invaders.

German military advices last night indicated that the next step in the Nazi march of conquest will be a drive directed at Paris. Belief was general that, before unleashing his air and submarine power against England, Hitler feels it necessary to deliver a smashing blow against the French and British armies defending the last land line left to the allies.

This line extends for approximately 200 miles from beyond Abbeville at the mouth of the Somme river to Montmedy in the east, where the improvised front selected by the allies after the first tremendous German mechanized push joins with the main Maginot line.

The French general staff apparently had not anticipated the German break thru the little Maginot line at Sedan and now has been forced to take up the best natural defensive lines available.

Geographical Aid Utilized.

These are being built to a great degree on the line of the Somme river and on the line of the Aisne river farther east. Altho this line is not believed to be supported by any great amount of prepared works, it is the best that topography allows the allies at the moment.

The Nazis now control practically all of Flanders, holding territory there they never occupied during the world war, altho in the southeast section of the line the Germans hold much less territory than they did at their greatest advance in 1918 as the map on the back page of this issue of THE TRIBUNE shows.

Military observers, however, feel that there are two soft spots in the new line which the Germans may be able to exploit. The first is at the point where the line leaves the Somme and jumps across the Oise river to pick up the Aisne. The second is between Rethel and Sedan, where the line leaves the Aisne to embrace the fortified city of Sedan.

The rout in Flanders, costly as it may have been, has given the allies the great advantage of time in which to strengthen their new defense line. Works undoubtedly have been erected, troops deployed in strong positions, and artillery placed in support.

The loss of channel ports has severely handicapped communications between France and England, but last night's report that a new British army had crossed to take up positions behind the new line indicated that the handicap may not be insurmountable.

Le Havre, after Marseilles the most important seaport in France, still is available, and it is apparently thru that port that troops and supplies are being moved from England.

Ancient Military Barrier.

The line of the Somme has from Roman times been one of the most important military barriers in northern France. The river in its lower course is neither very wide nor very deep, but it is not so much the stream itself as the maze of marshes that adjoin it which represent its principal hazard to an enemy. Far spreading peat bogs are an insurmountable obstacle to tanks and other mechanized equipment thru a large part of its course.

A layer of chalk underlies the entire region, and problems of drainage in trenches and dugouts became so important in the world war that both armies carried staffs of geologists to advise them where and how to dig their defensive positions.

The city of Amiens, reported to be in allied hands, guards one of the principal passages of the Somme barrier, at a point where a narrowing of the valley and the presence of several islands facilitate a crossing. Amiens has been called the "Venice of the north," which suggests its watery site.

Many Canal Systems.

Communications to the Somme are good, for there are many canal systems as well as numerous railways, six of which converge in Amiens alone.

The break where the line jumps to the Aisne is in some degree protected by the trench of the Oise and by large forests. The Aisne itself is a natural moat, protected to the east by the formidable Rheims mountain bastion. Here the French are in a strong position along a crest from which accurately directed fire can be trained on the exposed meadows and fields thru which the Germans must advance.

Near Rethel, the Aisne and its lateral canal constitute an obstacle of sufficient importance for the Germans to have selected it for a strong defensive line in the world war.

In Washington, D. C., yesterday Gen. George C. Marshall, United States army chief of staff, estimated that 40 per cent of the German army's mechanized equipment had been destroyed in the drive to the English channel and much more of it had been badly battered.

Any such weakening of the German mechanized army will have a serious effect on a new drive against the allies. It is known that Gen. Maxime Weygand, generalissimo of the allied armies, feels that the developments of the war thus far were those to be expected, and that now the blitzkrieg is in a large part spent. For this reason Weygand is confident the allies will successfully hold their new line.

ANOTHER U. S. CUTTER LEAVES FOR DUTY IN GREENLAND WATERS

New York, May 30 [Special].—The coast guard cutter Campbell, carrying anti-aircraft guns and other armament, sailed from Staten Island today, presumably for Greenland, with an eighth months' food supply for its company of 160 officers and men.

The cutter's skipper is Commander Joseph Greenspun. Officials said there was no significance in the additional armament. It had been installed merely because orders had been issued to strengthen all cutters of the Campbell class.

Some of the supplies are believed to be for use of Greenlanders, to whom the coast guard recently dispatched a cutter carrying an American vice consul and a Red Cross expert to survey relief needs, if any.

SCIENCE HAS WAY TO SPEED UP ITS POWER MIRACLE

New York, May 30 (AP).—A speedy method of separating the new element U-235 from uranium, promising possibly early practical use of the amazing source of energy, will be announced shortly by a Swedish scientist. The forthcoming issue of Nature, a British scientific weekly, will describe the process.

U-235, an isotope or chemical twin of uranium, was discovered only recently and is reputed to possess 5,000,000 times the power output of coal. It releases energy, in the form of steam, when immersed in water.

Prof. Wilhelm Krasny-Ergen of the Wenner-Graens institute in Stockholm, has found a way to speed up extraction by 11,000 times, the paper says. Heretofore the only known extraction technique has been exceedingly slow, so slow in fact that it would take one extracting unit 11,995,074 years to produce a pound of the substance.

"His method promises to open the way to the extraction of U-235 at the rate of one pound every four days, or in even less time," the story says.

PARIS STUDIES WAY TO ASSURE FOOD SUPPLIES

Mandel is said to have given assurances that Paris would be properly protected and fed in any emergency.

ALLIED REVERSES BLAMED ON THREE CRUCIAL EVENTS

Vital Retreat Delayed by King Leopold's Plea.

PARIS, May 30.—Three crucial events played major parts in the disaster that befell the French and British forces in Flanders, military experts agreed tonight.

These crucial points fall into the train of events that began on May 11 and 12 on the Meuse river and now have reached their climax on the English channel coast around Dunkirk:

FIRST—The crossing of the Meuse river by the Germans between Namur and Sedan,

SECOND—The British and French decision to retreat on May 12, which was not carried out because of King Leopold's insistence that Antwerp must be protected, and THIRD—The subsequent passage of the bulk of the German armored divisions thru the 20 mile breach marked by Bapaume and the Somme river.

Why Wasn't Gate Closed?

Many Frenchmen wonder why the Bapaume gateway was not closed. Some light was thrown on this point today by revelation of certain events that happened before the capitulation of King Leopold's Belgian army on May 28.

The story is something like this:

On May 10 the western half of the allied armies left their fortified positions along the Belgian border to march to the aid of the Low Countries. It pivoted at Sedan, while the eastern half remained behind the Maginot line. The Germans immediately launched their major attack on the pivot, or hinge. For reasons not yet clear, Gen. Andre Corap's 9th army disintegrated completely between Namur and Sedan, and the German armored units began to pour thru the gap. The allied armies were cut in two.

Their extreme left had advanced as far north as Antwerp; indeed some units had reached Hertogenbosch [Bois-le-Duc] in Holland.

Had Planned to Retreat.

The logical reaction, according to some army experts, would have been to cease the advance and begin to retreat. It is understood the allied high command decided on this step, and indicated that the retreat should begin on May 12. King Leopold, it is said, demurred, invoking the necessity of protecting Antwerp. He finally agreed to begin to withdraw the night of May 15.

By that time two German columns, progressing respectively in the direction of Sedan-Rethel and Dinant-Charlerol, had rejoined south of the Sambre river, bringing about the fall of the defenses of the Meuse in the region of Mezieres.

It appeared that the Germans planned an attempt to break thru in the direction of Rheims and the valley of the Marne to Paris. This threat immobilized the allied forces to the east.

Suddenly Turn to West.

But the Germans, while still maintaining this pressure, turned the bulk of their mechanized forces in a westerly direction. Their rush was such that in six days the front had been pushed westward some 100 miles as the crow flies. In other words, the initial breach had been transferred that distance.

Nevertheless the Germans, apparently mindful of the Belgian, British, and French armies coming south, had reduced the width of their original wedge, which then was narrowing into a spearhead. It is estimated the breach was nearest to being filled when the British forces reached Bapaume, and Lord Gort's communique implied that certain of his units had taken lateral positions at the northern end of the gap.

Stand Came Too Late.

But already it was too late, it is agreed. The general speculation at that time was why the allied armies of the north were still on the Scheldt river. It is considered doubtless that King Leopold's defection had virtually begun.

From a spearhead the German mechanized advance, constantly reenforced, spread out again. Splitting into innumerable groups, the Germans swept on to the channel coast, crossed the Somme river to establish a number of bridgeheads which now have been reduced, then swerving north, made for Boulogne and Calais, seriously menacing the allied flank.

Manifestly there were allied forces south of the breach as well as north of it, but the immediate task of the allied high command then, it is pointed out, was to regroup its forces and not to disperse them still more.

PUBLIC ENLISTED IN BRITISH DRIVE ON SPY MENACE

Advised to Report Any Suspicious Persons.

BY JOSEPH CERUTTI.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 30.—The spy scare which has gripped Britain since Fuehrer Hitler's invasion of Scandinavia and the Low Countries reached new heights today. The public was informed it would be expected to cooperate with police in enforcing the new curfew on aliens.

In London aliens must be in their homes from midnight until 6 a. m. In the provinces the curfew starts at 10:30 p. m. Police patrols have been given a list of all aliens to facilitate nightly checkups.

The Public's Part.

The public's part in the hunt for possible subversives was indicated in Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard, which said that "neighbors who have reason to be suspicious will be helping their country if they report any breaking of the curfew."

Aliens mostly affected by the new restrictions are stage artists, restaurant and hotel staffs, and dance band musicians. Aliens caught breaking the law are liable to a fine of up to 100 pounds [about $320], or jail for six months or deportation.

Ban Radios in Autos.

Other emergency regulations ban radio apparatus in autos and forbid tailors to turn out army, navy, air force, police, fire brigade, or any other official uniforms for unauthorized customers.

Highway authorities have been ordered to remove all road signs and direction indicators which might prove of value to the Germans in case of an invasion.

BELGIAN CABINET TAKES THRONE FROM LEOPOLD

Order Deposes King in "Name of People."

BY ALEX SMALL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 30.—King Leopold III. was deprived of his throne tonight by the Belgian government. The government, which is in exile in France, approved an order deposing the young monarch "in the name of the Belgian people."

"Considering the country under the power of the invader," the government order said, "the ministers in council certify that it is impossible for the king to rule."

The order will be published tomorrow under the date of May 28—the day on which Leopold ordered the surrender of the Belgian army to the invading Germans.

Premier Hubert Pierlot of Belgium announced after Leopold's capitulation that action to depose him would be taken by the Belgian cabinet. The cabinet is sitting in Limoges, in west central France.

Mystery in the Making.

From the obscurity regarding the facts, the impression is that Leopold's action in surrendering is likely to become one of the great mysteries of history.

The mystery is made deeper here because there is an official French view which is being imposed with unanimity by the press. It is epitomized in the name given by the Paris papers to Leopold—"the Felon King."

The majority of Belgians with whom I have talked accept this view, with some modifications, but a minority, including some people of influence in Belgium, suspend judgment and say the facts, if ever they are entirely known, may cast a different light on the surrender.

Official View Holds Act Treason.

The official French view, printed in practically identical words in every Paris newspaper, is that Leopold accomplished an act of "organized and premeditated treason." A statement which occupies almost a column of Le Temps tonight started with the assertion that Leopold tried to impose censorship on the Belgian press to prevent the papers from expressing views too favorable to the western allies.

Other counts against Leopold, contained in the French press, are that he "exhibited a defeatist spirit which would have exposed an ordinary citizen to the rigors of martial law," opposed all proposals for the evacuation of civilians, and tried to keep in Belgium all the most prominent citizens, who thus risked being taken by the enemy.

A melodramatic atmosphere was reached in the French account of the last contacts between the king and his ministry. It was said that Leopold went to Ostend and four ministers visited him there in an attempt to persuade him to resign the post of military commander in chief.

Ministers Reproach King.

The ministers, it was said, reproached Leopold for not following the advice of Gen. Maxime Weygand, allied commander in chief, and Leopold replied that the Belgian army was too weary to effect the retreat which would save the situation.

The ministers, it was said, noted that the king's statements were incorrect, that the army's spirit was fine, and the army was in fighting order. The ministers had been cautioned by high ranking officers, who did not hesitate to pronounce the word treason," the French stories state. "The situation became dramatic."

National Defense Minister General Henri Denis, according to the French statement, told Leopold capitulation would violate an essential military regulation.

"The ministers ran against a wall of cold determination," it was said.

The ministers left Bruges, Belgium, May 25 "after a last interview with the king, who appeared exasperated at the disagreement between himself and his government," it was said. Another interview took place between the king and Premier Pierlot in which the premier made a final effort to prevent the king from capitulating, but the king said he was determined to sue for peace in order to preserve relative independence.

Plot Against Cabinet Charged.

A final accusation in the French press is that King Leopold telephoned to his cabinet by way of London asking any one of them to send him a blank sheet of paper with a minister's signature. It was said this sheet of paper was to be filled in with a request for a decree naming a new cabinet. According to the Belgian constitution, the signature of any member of the cabinet to such a request would have enabled Leopold to dissolve the present cabinet and name a dummy government. But the Belgian cabinet saw the trap and refused. Soon after this the king gave the order to cease firing.

Some papers printed the following alleged conditions of the surrender:

FIRST—The Belgians were to make no further military movement.

SECOND—They were to stand in ranks along the roads.

THIRD—They were to denote their presence by white placards.

FOURTH—There should be no destruction of munitions or food supplies.

FIFTH—The German armies were to be left free passage to the sea.

Statement Itself a Mystery.

This official French story, which certainly will have its place in history, is a mystery in itself. It suggests these questions: Who inspired it, and why? Why cannot THE TRIBUNE correspondent find a responsible Belgian who will do more than agree with parts of it, with reservations? Why was it omitted in this morning's edition of La Meuse, a Leige daily paper now published in Paris and serving practically as an official Belgian mouthpiece?

A clew to the motive for the French insistence on their version of the story is perhaps in this morning's L'Oeuvre, Paris paper. It says: "We are not seeking excuses for the faults and negligences committed on our part. But the events of which we have for the last three weeks been the witnesses, and the victims demand, perhaps, another explanation than the incompetence of such and such a chief or the unreadiness of such and such troops."

Von Reichenau's Rôle Told.

BERLIN, May 30 (AP).—Authorized German sources disclosed today Col. Gen. Walther von Reichenau, who is commanding the German right wing sweeping thru the Low Countries, conducted the negotiations which resulted in the Belgian army's capitulation. The Belgian negotiator was Maj. Gen. de Rousseaux. Secrecy was still maintained as to the whereabouts of King Leopold.

Seven Groups Still Fighting.

PARIS, May 30 (AP).—A Belgian government spokesman said today that seven groups of Belgian soldiers still were fighting with the allies despite King Leopold's orders to surrender. The number of men was not known.

Paul Van Zeeland, former premier of Belgium, said in an interview here today:

"All the living forces of the nation who have escaped the enemy must be assembled and reinvigorated and put to the common cause which Belgium and her allies are defending."

Van Zeeland said he does not despair for Belgium—despite the surrender by Leopold.

"One is conquered only when he recognizes himself conquered," he said.

"You can understand how I feel now, after hurrying back from America as in 1914," he said, "and upon arriving finding myself confronted by the worst."

GERMANS TAKE FRENCH GENERAL, HOST OF TROOPS

Claim 100,000 Foes Slain in Flanders Battle.

they are the masters of the air and sea on the channel between Calais, France, and Dover, England.

Some 15,000 Ton Ships.

Detailing the sinking of the transports by bombs, the Germans said some of the ships were of 15,000 tons. Of the ships damaged by bombs it was said 10 were warships; 21 others were partly set afire, and still others were rendered motionless or seriously damaged. German sources said there had been transport movements off the channel coast for four days.

Antiaircraft batteries on the shore, with their barrels leveled and capable of rapid fire, were said to have sunk one allied patrol vessel and damaged five other patrol vessels and five speedboats.

The French side of the channel, the Germans declared, is strewn with débris.

"Abandoned wrecks lie on sandbanks, masts and superstructures of sunken vessels protrude from the water and wrecks are drifting on the waves in a mile radius of Dunkirk. The air attack from above Dunkirk may give England an idea of what is awaiting her along her own coast," the Germans said.

Capture Mass of Booty.

The British expeditionary force, the Germans claimed, abandoned all their vast equipment and supplies when rushing to the coast.

According to the German reports, the southern armies of Gen. Maxime Weygand, allied commander in chief, are continuing their "weak and insufficient attempts" to attack the Germans east-west front stretching over 200 miles from the channel coast to the Moselle river. The strongest attack by the French seems to have been prepared south of Amiens. The German war communique reported the bombardment in the woods of French troop concentrations in this region. The French claim to have captured a bridgehead near Amiens. French attacks supported by tanks are stated to have been repelled on the lower Somme river.

U-Boat Sinks 7 Ships.

The German war communique announced that a German U-boat sank several allied vessels aggregating 38,000 tons.

Most Germans, watching straws in the wind, believe the fury of the land and air attack will descend within the next few weeks upon the French armies shielding Paris.

Many military observers believe a deeper plunge into France is necessary for the German army before it can start real operations against England.

Charge French Brutality.

There is a bitter campaign in the press against the "decadence and brutality" of French soldiers. DNB, also, is ascribing acts of brutality to the British troops.

One story relayed by the agency said that three members of a captured German tank crew were set afire by French colonials after gasoline had been poured over their clothing.

The allied air forces struck behind the western front into Germany last night, but again the Germans declared the attacks were "against unimportant nonmilitary objectives."

DNB, the official news agency, said three bombs dropped Tuesday night on the residential section of Gelsenkirchenbuer, in western Germany, killed two civilians, injured four and caused considerable property damage.

MOONEY'S PRISON MATE SCOFFS AT U. S. WAR FEARS

Warren K. Billings, former prison mate of Tom Mooney in the 1916 preparedness day bombing case, spoke yesterday before 75 members of the International Workers of the World in a hall at 333 West North avenue. He devoted much of his talk to an attempt to minimize the danger of an attack by foreign forces on the United States. Billings was freed from the California state prison at Folsom last Oct. 17 after he had served 22 years. He said he learned to repair watches in prison and now has a watch repair shop in San Francisco.

U-BOAT SINKING OF SHIP ANGERS BUENOS AIRES

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, May 30 (AP).—Resentful crowds of Argentineans surged thru the streets of Buenos Aires tonight following a long interview of President Roberto Artiz with German Ambassador Edmund von Thermann over the U-boat sinking of the merchantman Uruguay off the Spanish coast. The ship was sunk Tuesday night.

The crowds were angered by reports half the crew of the Uruguay was left afloat in lifeboats 140 miles from the Spanish coast. Fourteen members of the crew are missing.

Police dispersed a group of angry youths headed for the German club. A man was arrested after hurling stones thru windows of the Deutsche La Plata Zeitung, one of the oldest German papers in South America. Among others taken into custody were two sons of Carlos Noel, president of the chamber of deputies.

The Zeitung, pro-Nazi in policy, pulled an iron curtain over its windows, shutting from sight the war bulletins it usually displays.

French Lobster Boat Sunk.

MADRID, May 30 (AP).—Ten survivors of the French lobster boat Juliem arrived today at Corcubion and said their ship had been sunk Tuesday by a German submarine off Cape Finisterre.

QUESTION OF U. S. WAR ENTRY MAIN TOPIC IN LONDON

Civilians Seem Unworried by Approach of Nazis.

BY GUY MURCHIE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, May 30.—Entering a British port in the morning after our eight hour dash across the English channel from France, we saw a balloon barrage and quantities of seaplanes and freighters, but no warships.

Customs was extremely tedious and strict, taking more than two hours. From the train to London the countryside appeared as green as Illinois farmland in the damp spring altho the fields were smaller and there were more hedges.

There were more bicycles than cars along the roads. Many important buildings, such as hangars and oil tanks, were camouflaged, some by bright, fantastic colors calculated to be puzzling from the air.

Many Airmen in London.

Rows of houses in outer London, all exactly alike and dull in color, were a dismal contrast to those in France, Spain, and Portugal. The central city reminded me much of Boston, Mass., and you have the feeling the houses are so old they are about to fall into the streets.

Like Paris, London is less crowded than usual. Many soldiers, nearly half in Royal Air Force uniforms, walk about. The civilians seem entirely untroubled by the war. I saw a girl riding a motorcycle thru the winding, narrow streets and dodging a huge tank placed to provide water in event of incendiary bombardment.

Fewer women wear hats here than in America. About one person in ten carries a gas mask. Street signs which advertise chimney sweepers and green grocers and movies are American, and the chief topic of conversation is whether America will enter the war.

Blackout More Complete.

The blackout during four hours of summer darkness is more complete than in Paris. The first impression gives one a sensation probably similar to that of William Beebe on his first descent half a mile in the ocean in the bathysphere. It is a world of tiny colored lights and mysterious signals, most of them moving slowly and silently and all having important meanings.

Bus drivers blindly trust pedestrians to see their dim signals and sidestep them. Cars have side arrow indicators for turning. There are special traffic signals, advertisment signs, and flashlight signals to the approaching buses, and there are indications by numerous ladies of the night who use the blackout to every possible advantage. Some address the men "monsieur," hoping to give the impression they are French. Many wear white clothes for visibility or use flashlights to show themselves. The air raid shelters would be regarded as fire escapes in Chicago.

Game of Blind Man's Buff.

The blackout is a game of blind man's buff. It gives a night club atmosphere to ordinary street life. It seems ridiculous as far as effectiveness is concerned. Being on a river, London could be spotted easily by enemy aircraft on any clear night, especially in the moonlight.

London's vulnerability to an invasion is striking to a newcomer's eye. The gas, electric, and water mains are less than a foot deep in the street. The surrounding industrial area is highly concentrated and the people individually do not seem to realize that their traditional isolation may be nearing an end.

Suburbanites remove the distributors from their cars at night in keeping with regulations for defense against parachutists and fifth columnists and have shelters three feet deep in their gardens to guard against bomb splinters.

New air raid shelters being built in London streets are of unreinforced bricks.

BELGIAN ARMY CUT TO PIECES, SAYS WITNESS

BERNE, Switzerland, May 30 (AP).—A witness to the battle in Flanders, who arrived here thru Germany, said tonight that the Belgian army had been cut to bits and that there was no reason to wonder why King Leopold capitulated.

"Whole regiments vanished under German fire the day before the surrender," said this eyewitness, who left the war zone the day Leopold gave up. "The morale of the troops was shattered by the presence of masses of refugees literally on the army's skirts. German bombers striking at Belgian supply lines struck the refugees, too—Belgian refugees.

"Many Belgian soldiers seemed stark mad, torn between a desire to continue the fight and the inability to avoid bringing German fire on refugees who shared their camps."

LORD CAMBRIDGE, COUSIN OF KING, KILLED IN ACTION

LONDON, May 30 (AP).—Lord Frederick Cambridge, a first cousin of King George VI. of Great Britain, has been killed in action, it was disclosed today.

Lord Frederick, a captain in the Coldstream guards, was the second son of Queen Mary's oldest brother the last marquess of Cambridge.

The death of Capt. David James Robert Simson, "killed while in command of his ship," also was announced. He was the husband of Arlette Thal, daughter of the late G. J. Thal and Mrs. Thal of New York and Paris.

ITALY MUM ON WHEN, OR IF, IT WILL ENTER WAR

Mussolini Calls Cabinet Session for June 4.

ROME, May 30 (AP).—Italy went ahead with implementing its war machine today, but cast little light on the time it will start operating.

[A usually reliable Berlin source reported Adolf Hitler planned a "sensational announcement" dealing perhaps with Italy's entry into the conflict.]

Premier Mussolini called his cabinet for discussion next Tuesday of "important matters."

In the Fascist press, one editorial declared "England and France are 25 years behind the times" and concluded that this was a sufficient reason to guarantee they will lose the war.

Boys, Men, Women to Serve.

Civil mobilization regulations published today will, upon order of Mussolini, subject to service men up to the age of 70, boys down to the age of 14, and women from 14 to 60. They would be assigned to various noncombatant tasks.

Latest press accounts have mentioned Nice, Corsica, Tunisia, Egypt, Gibraltar, Malta, Cyprus, and the Dardanelles as within the scope of Italy's increasing "aspirations."

The exodus of Americans continues. The entire student body of the North American college, consisting of 106 student priests, will leave Rome tomorrow aboard the United States liners Manhattan and President Harrison. Other Americans will be aboard.

The American consulate advised Americans unable to get accommodations to go to Bordeaux, France, and board the Liner Washington.

Speculate on Attack.

Il Giornale D'Italia published a dispatch from Salonika, Greek port on the Aegean sea, speculating on the likelihood of an allied attack there.

The dispatch said plans to disembark the allied eastern army at Salonika on April 29 had been abandoned because of German successes in Norway and "differences" between Gen. Maxime Weygand, then near eastern commander, and Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, whom he succeeded as commander in chief of all allied land forces.

Observers believed that the first Italian war blow on the side of Germany might be struck southward in the Mediterranean sea rather than directly at France.

[Under the allied-Turkish alliance, Turkey—guardian of the Dardanelles—is pledged to enter the war as an ally of Britain and France in the "event of an act of aggression leading to war in the Mediterranean area."]

The mainland army was believed being strengthened steadily by reservists. This system has made impossible any accurate estimate of the number of men under arms, but competent observers guessed it might approach 2,000,000.

Pendergast Returns

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

T. J. Pendergast (right), former Kansas City Democratic boss, shakes hands with Robert Lyons, an associate, on way to federal building to hear terms of probation.

Kansas City, Mo., May 30 (AP).—Tom Pendergast, who one year ago left his Democratic political machine in control of Kansas City and went to prison, came out today from Leavenworth federal penitentiary—stripped of his power and facing a fight to stay from behind prison bars.

Monday a date will be set for his trial on a state charge that he bribed R. Emmett O'Malley, the man he helped put in the office of state insurance superintendent, into settling a huge rate case in favor of fire insurance companies.

The federal government in this successful prosecution of Pendergast for income tax evasion, leading to his plea of guilty, charged that Pendergast got a pay off for helping settle the rate case, but made an evasion tax return after losing large sums in bets on race horses.

Expel French Writer.

Authorities expelled Pierre Gallozzi, French correspondent of the newspaper Paris Soir, today.

The reason was not made public, but friends said they understood Italians had found some of Gallozzi's recent articles to be objectionable. He was the first foreign correspondent to be expelled in 1940 but the 12th since Aug. 1, 1938, and the second representative of the Paris Soir to be put out of Italy within the past year.

NAZIS HAIL NEW WAR TACTICS IN ROUT OF ENEMY

Credit Bombers, Tanks for Army's Success.

BY E. R. NODERER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, May 30.—The success of the German tank divisions in smashing thru the allied defense lines was attributed tonight to new tactics developed by Gen. Guderian, commander of the tank forces.

All major tank attacks in the drive to the west have been made in close coöperation with Stukas, the deadly German dive bombers. As the tank divisions roll toward the enemy they are preceded by Stukas which direct them by wireless to the weakest points in the defenders' lines.

Before the tanks reach the enemy the Stukas roar down in close formation, dropping 1,000 pound bombs which are said to have a destructive power greater than any bomb of similar weight hitherto known.

Use 650 Planes in Attack.

In one recent attack, according to German military authorities, 650 Stukas were used to demolish enemy tank forces.

Allied prisoners are reported here as saying that the force of the heavy bombs was so great that in some instances the heaviest French tanks were thrown several feet in the air and in other cases torn to pieces.

Gen. Guderian, who has abandoned world war tank tactics, is operating the German armored units in conjunction with the infantry and artillery, as well as the air force. Numerous divisions of tanks of various speeds and weights have been formed. Each division is operating independently within a general plan of attack.

Form Six Mile Wedge.

As the Stukas drop their high explosives, the tanks advance in the form of a long slim wedge. The Germans say these forces operate like a lawn mower, sweeping clear an area six miles broad into which roar high speed motorized infantry and artillery units.

In many cases tanks have been used to break thru enemy lines and cripple communications from the rear, thus cutting off reënforcements. When the tanks run into heavy resistance they merge into a "barricade," much as prairie schooners in the early days of the American west drew up in a circle to ward off attacks by Indians.

The mobile armored vehicles thus become a "fort of steel" and in this formation they defend themselves while awaiting the arrival of reënforcements.

Have Fuel for 160 Miles.

Most of the details of German tank construction are secret, but it is known that the heaviest units have a speed in excess of 20 miles an hour. They are equipped with engines built in the Daimler Benz works, which also manufacture aviation engines.

They carry fuel sufficient for 120 to 160 miles and are armed with guns similar to antiaircraft weapons. The caliber of these guns is secret, but the shells are said to penetrate steel plate about 1 inch thick.

German tanks are equipped with "harpoon machine guns," which are designed to explode ground mines in the path of the armored vehicles. In Poland ground mines cost the Germans a large number of tanks, but these losses are said to have been reduced to a minimum in the western campaign.

Have Special Armor.

The heaviest German tanks are armored with a new alloy called "staguel." German military men claim even the famous French 75 shells will be unable to pierce this armor. However, this steel is expensive to produce and is used on only the heaviest tanks.

For some of the battles in the drive toward the channel the Germans say they massed as many as 2,000 tanks.

PRIVATE PILOTS MEET TONIGHT TO ASK ROLE IN DEFENSE PROGRAM

Air defense and the part private pilots will play in the expansion of United States military aviation will be discussed tonight by private and commercial Chicago airmen at a meeting in the grand ballroom of Hotel Sherman.

In the Chicago area there are 800 persons holding private pilots' licenses and nearly 8,000 others are taking instruction. Spokesmen for the group said it believes that in case of war it would be called on for service of one kind or another. Inasmuch as their services are to be demanded in an emergency, the men declare, they should be given an opportunity to gain military training to fit them for air reserve duty.

A committee will be selected to go to Washington with a plan that will include nonmilitary flyers in the country's defense program.

CHICAGO HONORS WAR HEROES IN 4 HOUR PARADE

Throngs Cheer Flag, Vets, Bands, Soldiers.

BY CHARLES LEAVELLE.

(Pictures on preceding page.)

Down Michigan avenue for nearly four hours yesterday afternoon moved a magnificent pageant of Chicagoland's military glory—past, present, and future.

It was this city's 72d Memorial day observance. It was performed in the presence of 200,000 persons and against the gloomiest world background in 25 years.

Leading the contingents of war veterans were 11 men in the Union blue of civil war days. They were a remnant of the once mighty Grand Army of the Republic. Few Memorial days remain for these oldest living heroes of the nation. There were tears in many eyes as thin old hands waved to the crowds and smiling old faces peered from automobile windows.

State Chief Reviews G. A. R.

Capt. Thomas Ambrose, state commander of the G. A. R., rode in the first car as grand marshal. With the others he reviewed the parade from the stand at Congress plaza and Michigan avenue.

Behind this handful of boys in blue marched veterans whose numbers also are dwindling. They are the National Indian War Veterans of the United States army and the United Spanish War Veterans.

Then came the world war veterans, separated by smartly uniformed bands. There were Veterans of Foreign Wars and post after post of the American Legion with colors flying.

These men marched in a land of peace, home from the fury of Flanders fields of 1917-'18. But during that very same hour some of their foreign comrades of 22 years ago were back in those fields, in one of the world's greatest battles. Thus ended the part of the pageant that recalled military glories of the past.

Youth Carries Traditions On.

But interspersed in the line were those who will carry American traditions into the future. Erect and clear eyed they came on. They are the Reserve Officers Training Corps cadets of Chicagoland. With their bands and colors these R. O. T. C. youngsters carried the fire and vigor of youth down the old avenue.

And there was other youth; sons and daughters of war veterans, marching in special groups. Many of these also belong to the R. O. T. C.

Then down the avenue moved the fighting men and machines of the present. Acres of khaki caps, rising and falling to the rhythm of the march. Bayonets, bristling and glinting in the afternoon sun. Motorized artillery. Antiaircraft guns, collapsed like great jack-knives on their rubber tired carriages. Rumbling tanks and trucks painted in olive drab.

View New Combat Troops.

The public had its first glimpse of the fast, heavily armored combat cars of the 33d division, Illinois National Guard. And the crowds studied keenly all these engines of war; antitank and machine guns, light field pieces, and heavy 155 mm. howitzers.

From Chicago avenue to Roosevelt road and from 2 p. m. until long after 5 the great pageant moved. Spectators had begun forming thin lines soon after 11 a. m., and special police details took their posts.

Fog that had shut out the sun during the morning lifted slowly, but as the parade started the tops of tall buildings still were obscured by clouds of vapor. The sunlight, thin and yellow at the start, was warm and bright by midafternoon.

The marchers formed a great ribbon of color. Gold and chromium helmets glinted. There were uniforms of blue, scarlet, and white and gold. R. O. T. C. bands and saucy little drum majorettes were cheered.

Cheer French Veterans.

There was prolonged cheering for the French war veterans as they passed the reviewing stand. In the stand was Attorney General John E. Cassidy, representing Gov. Horner. Mayor Kelly was there with Lieut. Gen. Stanley H. Ford, commander of the 6th corps area, and others of the military.

Many of these had officiated earlier in the day at ceremonies in the city's 22 cemeteries, where graves of soldier dead were decorated with American flags. In Oakwoods cemetery there were graves from which flew the Stars and Bars, the emblem of the south's lost cause.

The last of these solemn ceremonies was held in Grant park when the great parade had ended. It was at the statue of Gen. John A. Logan, who started Memorial day in 1868 with his famous general order No. 11.

In the late afternoon the guns of the 122d field artillery thundered a tribute to the heroic dead of all wars. The 131st Infantry band played the "Star Spangled Banner." Then, ending the 72d Memorial day for Chicagoland, the plaintive notes of taps sounded thru the park.

SPEED DEFENSE, END DEPRESSION, JAMES DEMANDS

Gettysburg, Pa., May 30 (AP).—Standing in the national cemetery where Abraham Lincoln made his famed Gettysburg address, Gov. Arthur H. James declared today America can end at once its long struggle against depression by spurring industry for national defense.

Gov. A. H. James.

"To rearm America we must revive our dormant industries," James said. "To create our defenses millions of idle hands must learn to handle tools.

"To defend America we must have many things which will be of service to us alike in peace and war. We must have highways, airplanes, and airports. We must have a trained and skilled army. Peace can be attained, if at all, first by preparing to defend ourselves and second by tending to our own business."

RED CROSS ASKS MORE AID FOR WAR REFUGEES

GENEVA, Switzerland, May 30 (AP).—The International Red Cross and the league of Red Cross societies issued an appeal today for immediate help for more than 5,000,000 war refugees swarming into France. The refugees were said to be in desperate condition. The appeal was directed to 22 national Red Cross organizations in Europe, Asia, and Latin America. Officials said the United States Red Cross already was coöperating to the fullest extent.

TRIBUTE IS PAID AMERICAN DEAD IN PARIS, LONDON

War Prevents Decorating of Soldiers' Graves.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 30.—Memorial day ceremonies in tribute to the American war dead buried in France and Belgium were held in Paris today. Premier Paul Reynaud and American Ambassador William C. Bullit took part.

A solemn service of commemoration was held in the American cathedral of the Holy Trinity, where Gen. Pierre Hering, military governor of Paris, and Gen. Joseph Gouraud represented the French army. Also attending were Louis Marin, minister of state, and Albert Riviere, minister of pensions.

Cemeteries in War Zones.

Since all military cemeteries of France and Belgium are in the war zone, including two which are believed to be held by the Germans, it was impossible to decorate each individual grave as in former years.

However, within the cathedral, seven marble crosses—one for each American Expeditionary Force cemetery—had been grouped about the altar, and before them symbolic wreaths of blood red poppies were placed by American Legion officials.

File Thru Battle Cloister.

After the echoes of taps had died away, the congregation of some 400 persons filed thru the cathedral's battle cloister, dedicated to the American expeditionary forces.

During the day Ambassador Bullitt placed flowers upon the tomb of the French Unknown soldier, and joined with the Legion in a pilgrimage to Surenes cemetery just outside Paris.

Hold Services in London.

LONDON, May 30 (AP).—While hundreds of Americans waited in Ireland for a ship to transport them from the war zone, Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy and scores of others attended a memorial service today for 600 United States soldiers, sailors and marines of the last war buried in the British cemeteries.

When the brief service at St. Margaret's church ended, Kennedy went to nearby Westminster Abbey and placed a wreath on the tomb of Britain's unknown soldier.

"We know your prayers are with this nation," said the subdean of the abbey, accepting the wreath, "and that you stand for the same things we do."

Rites in Havana.

HAVANA, Cuba, May 30.—Americans here observed Memorial day with services at the American Legion mausoleum in Colon cemetery this morning. Ambassador George Messersmith spoke at a brief ceremony.

300 AMERICANS ABROAD LACK CASH TO RETURN

LONDON, May 30 (AP).—Three hundred dollars stands between 300 to 400 "destitute" Americans and safe passage home from the war danger zone, authoritative embassy sources disclosed today.

The $300 is required for passage on the United States liner President Roosevelt due at Galway, Ireland, Saturday, to pick up refugees. About 300 Americans who have booked passage traveled thru Dublin to the port today on a special train. Three to four hundred others were said to be "so poor they hesitate to sign promissory notes to the government for $300 which they feel they never will be able to repay."

The American Refugee society has been helping with "small loans," and the state department has forwarded a "small sum of money" to Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy in London to help in the evacuation. No regular fund exists for such work.

27 Jap Planes Bomb Area Around Chungking 3 Hours

CHUNGKING, China, May 30 (AP).—The Chungking district was bombed this morning in the fifth successive day of Japanese air raids, altho the city itself, the provisional capital of the central Chinese government, was not a target. Twenty-seven Japanese planes participated in the 3-hour attack.

BIGGEST U. S. SHIP OFF TO EUROPE ON MERCY TRIP

New York, May 30 (AP).—Bound for southern Europe to carry Americans out of the war zones, the U. S. line's 24,269-ton Washington, largest passenger liner in America, sailed today with a cargo of first aid supplies destined for Red Cross units.

The ship, its sides and decks emblazoned with its name and 15-foot-high American flags, also carried 11 men heading for the war fronts to drive ambulances for the American volunteer ambulance corps and the American field service in France. There were 77 passengers, 27 of them Americans. In addition, the ship carried 2,693 sacks of mail.

The ship was diverted from her normal run to Genoa and Naples to pick up Americans in Lisbon and Bordeaux, in addition to Genoa.

Her capacity of 1,081 passengers has been expanded to 1,962 by installation of 100 special berths and 781 cots.

Depose Mayor in France for Abandoning His Duties

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 30.—Mayor Vendries of Corbeil, about 20 miles south of Paris, today was stripped of his municipal authority and deposed from office by the prefect of the Seine-et-Oise department. The reason given was that he precipitately abandoned his city hall and mayoral functions last week. Additional sanctions, it was said, may be taken against him.

MOVE CANADIAN TANK TROOPS TO DETROIT BORDER

Tighten Guard After Bund Menace Is Cited.

WINDSOR, Ont., May 30 [Canadian Press].—A hundred men of the Essex [tank] regiment today were sent to the strategic St. Luke road barracks across the international line from Detroit.

Region where Canada tightens guard.

Eight men were added to the royal Canadian mounted police department in Windsor, bringing its strength to 17. Patrols in the Detroit river, separating Windsor and Detroit, will be increased and special guards will be assigned to 24 hour duty at the tunnel and bridge linking the cities.

[Col. C. E. Reynolds, president of the Canadian Corps association, said recently at Toronto that 7,500 German bund members across the Detroit river were armed and a menace to Windsor.]

Police reported the arrest of a man identified as Alfred Schlecter, 28 years old, whom they described as an enemy alien. He was held for investigation.

Fascist Officials Arrested.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., May 30.—Royal Canadian mounted police today swooped down on the National Unity [Fascist] party, and arrested and arraigned seven of its top leaders, including Adrien Arcand, young Quebec "fuehrer" of the group, on charges under the Defense of Canada regulations.

Arcand is suspected of being the leader of "fifth column" activities in Canada. Arrested with him was Dr. Noel Decarie, wealthy Montreal dentist, treasurer of the party.

Striking swiftly before dawn, the troopers also seized Maurice Scott, leader of the party's uniformed guards; Henri Arcand, national director of transport; Marius Gatien, national adjutant of the party's legionnaires; Hughes Clement, provincial adjutant of the legionnaires, and G. R. Barck, party organizer.

Accused of Opposing War.

The men were charged with violating regulations against spreading reports or making statements likely to interfere with prosecution of the war.

Authorities charge Arcand's "Iron Guard" numbered more than 2,000 followers who wore black shirt uniforms emblazoned with swastikas and who gave the Fascist salute.

Police claimed the arrests today marked the collapse of the National Unity party. The blow against the Fascist group came after police sifted evidence seized a week ago in more than 20 raids on homes and offices of party leaders and members.

BILL PUTTING RFC IN BUSINESS SENT TO SENATE FLOOR

Empowers Manufacture of Defense Supplies.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 30.—A bill giving the Reconstruction Finance corporation power to engage in the manufacturing business on a scale limited only by its financial resources was reported favorably by the senate banking and currency committee today.

Under the terms of the bill, the RFC would have power not only to finance but to create or organize corporations engaged in the manufacture of munitions or any other equipment and supplies deemed by the President to be necessary to the national defense.

Some senators, noting the sweeping terms of the bill, suggested it might be used either to socialize the aircraft, armaments, and other national defense industries, or to use the threat of nationalization as a club to force private industry to do what it might not want to do.

Sought by Jesse Jones.

The provisions vesting these vast powers in the RFC were incorporated, at the request of Federal Loan Administrator Jesse H. Jones, in a bill directing the RFC to return $300,000,000 of its capital to the treasury department. This is part of the President's program to recover $700,000,000 from the capital funds of government lending agencies and classify it as income to keep the deficit as low as possible.

Jones told the committee the amendments he proposed were vital to the administration's national defense program. Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky confirmed this statement. Jones also told the committee that Edward R. Stettinius Jr., chairman of the United States Steel corporation and a member of President Roosevelt's advisory commission to the council of national defense, favored the proposal.

Republicans Fight Bill.

Republican members of the committee questioned this statement and demanded that Stettinius be called. The meeting was adjourned until 3 p. m., but Stettinius did not appear. The committee, however, proceeded to report the bill.

Senator Robert A. Taft [R., O.] and Senator John A. Danaher [R., Conn.] fought the bill unsuccessfully. They sought to restrict the financing or manufacturing powers of the RFC to arms, ammunition, and implements of war, as defined by the President's neutrality proclamation, but the administration supporters insisted on retaining the phrase "equipment and supplies necessary to the national defense."

What Measure Authorizes.

The bill authorizes the RFC, when requested by the federal loan administrator with the approval of the President, to "create or to organize a corporation or corporations with power to acquire and carry strategic and critical materials as defined by the President; to purchase land and to purchase, build, and expand plants, and to purchase equipment and machinery, for the manufacture of equipment and supplies necessary to the national defense; to lease such plants to private corporations to engage in such manufacture, or, if the President finds it necessary for a government agency to engage in such manufacture, to engage in such manufacture itself. The corporation may make loans to or purchase the capital stock of such corporations for any purchase related to the national defense program, on such terms and conditions as the corporation may determine."

Jones announced that the RFC has about 1 billion dollars which could be used for this purpose. The lending capacity of the RFC is increased, however, as outstanding loans are repaid. Moreover, congress has at various times increased the lending capacity.

Canadian Legion Proposes Conscription of Man Power

MONTREAL, Que., May 30 (AP).—The Canadian Legion today urged the dominion government to speed the war effort by taking "immediate steps to conscript man power, wealth, national resources, business, industry, and other institutions." The Legion decided to send a committee to Ottawa to discuss the situation with Canadian government officials.

Back Home Again

The Cahokia, Ill., courthouse, which was rededicated yesterday on original site.

Cahokia, Ill., May 30 (AP).—The little old traveling courthouse of Cahokia was rededicated today on its original site after a belated return from the 1893 World's Columbian exposition in Chicago.

The center of attention for a crowd which far exceeded the numbers it harbored in the late 1700s when it served as seat of the St. Clair county territorial government, the log and mortar paneled building became a part of the Illinois park system.

The building was restored to its first site after standing for more than a third of a century in Jackson park, Chicago. It was rededicated today by Charles P. Casey, director of the state department of public works and buildings.

TELLS OF ALLIED SEA, LAND BLOWS TO WIN NARVIK

3 Sided Drive on Land Covered by Navy.

LONDON, May 30 (AP).—A Briton who witnessed the capture of Narvik yesterday says the Norwegian ore port was wrested from the Germans by French, Polish, and Norwegian troops while the heaviest guns of the British fleet silenced shore batteries and reduced the German positions to heaps of smouldering ruins.

The fall of Narvik, held by Germans since the April 9 invasion of Norway, came at 11:20 p. m., exactly an hour after the British fleet started bombarding the German defenses.

French Troops Landed.

French troops in a military landing craft crossed Narvik fjord at 10:45 under severe German fire and made a landing on the headland west of the beleaguered port.

The French deployed thru the hills and attacked from the northwest while the British kept up their bombardment from the warships.

British troops attacked from the south and Norwegians stormed the eastern defenses, aided by the naval barrage.

The city still was on fire today. British warships were reported shelling the mountain tunnels converted into forts by the retreating Germans.

Called Useless Success.

BERLIN, May 30 (AP).—Occupation of the Norwegian arctic ore port of Narvik by the allies was regarded here as an insignificant reverse. Said Adolf Hitler's Volkischer Beobachter: "It is a useless success. The enemy enters a town reduced to a heap of ruins by a week's bombardment."

Nazis Face Trap.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, May 30 (AP).—Fighting a rear guard action toward the Swedish frontier, German troops withdrawing from the Norwegian ore port of Narvik today were reported in danger of having their retreat cut off by Norwegian troops deployed along the border.

Dispatches from the Swedish frontier said the Germans were working their way along the rail line running from Narvik east into Sweden, while the Nazi air force sought to relieve pressure on the troops by intensified bombing attacks.

Allied and Norwegian forces which ousted the Germans from the town were said to have complete occupation of Narvik itself and to be engaged in mopping up operations south of the port.

RUSSIA RECALLS SOLDIERS FROM HUNGARY BORDER

Budapest Suspends Plans to Increase Army.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, May 30 (AP).—Russia has withdrawn soldiers from the Hungarian frontier and Hungary, in return, has suspended plans to call more reserves to her army, it was announced officially today, in a southeastern Europe peace move.

This action, along with others to settle Balkan disputes, appeared generally to convince Budapest that the Rome-Berlin axis might succeed in limiting the European war to British and French territory.

Budapest is said to be strongly influenced by Berlin and Rome.

Economic Parley Indicated.

The reciprocal measures of military assurance between Hungary and Russia resulted from an agreement reached by Russia's premier-foreign commissar, Vyacheslav Molotov, and the Hungarian minister to Moscow. Officials said the relations between the two countries now are the best since the soviets reached the crest of the Carpathian mountains last fall on the partition of Poland.

Indications were that a Hungarian economic mission might soon be dispatched to Moscow.

A lessening of tension here led many Hungarians to believe the interests of Germany, Italy, and Russia in southeastern Europe—where that trio of major powers has a decided voice—nearly have reached an equilibrium.

Peace Chances Believed Increased.

Belief is expressed in some quarters that the chances of this area remaining peaceful are increased, even if Italy enters the war soon.

Jugo-Slavia's fear of an Italian attack has been quieted by Fascist diplomats, it was reported.

Rumania was understood to be seeking vigorously a settlement of the Bessarabian question with Russia. Bessarabia, a Rumanian province, part of the czarist Russian empire, went to Rumania after the world war.

Fears have been expressed in the Balkans that Russia's concern over Bessarabia might lead to soviet invasion of Rumania.

GAY VIENNA LIVES AGAIN IN W-G-N'S 'BLOSSOM TIME'

Operetta Triumph Ends Air Theater Season.

The gay Vienna of 1826 with its beer gardens and its barons, its Mitzis and its Fritzes, its songs of love and its Schubert, was alive again for an hour last night.

Seven hundred guests crowded into the main studio of W-G-N, saw it recreated, and a vast coast-to-coast radio audience heard it come to life as "Blossom Time." Sigmund Romberg's wistful, moving operetta on the life of Franz Schubert, was produced on the Chicago Theater of the Air.

The operetta, called America's favorite by many critics, is based on the tragic, unrequited love of Schubert, the dreamy and poor young music teacher who wrote imperishable love lyrics, yet lost his lady. Woven thruout it to form an enchanting musical background, now gay, now sad, now throbbing with emotion, are bits and fragments of Schubert's music. This took in everything from "Marche Militaire" to "Song of Love" and "Ave Maria."

Gorin and Marion Claire Star.

Igor Gorin, internationally famous baritone, sang the rôle of Schubert, coming out with such rounded, pounding waves of song that the studio audience burst into unrestrained applause. Marion Claire, radiant Chicago soprano, sang the rôle of Mitzi, the young girl who shunned Schubert for a baron with identical initials. Their duet in "Ave Maria," with its haunting refrain, "Peace, peace to my lonely heart," was one of the evening's great triumphs.

The third musical guest star was Michael Bartlett, young tenor, who sang the rôle of the baron, the perfidious wretch who won Mitzi when he sang to her the yearning song of love, "Longing," which Schubert wrote about her.

Fine Supporting Cast.

A fine supporting cast of nine, the same group that contributed so notably to the first two Theater of the Air productions, was on hand. Muriel Bremner, who had the rôle of Madam Bellabruna, the designing wench who first causes Mitzi to leave Schubert, won great praise with her fiery acidity and venom.

But "Blossom Time's" charm and grace always are dependent upon its incidental music. This was provided beautifully by the W-G-N concert orchestra and chorus, directed by Henry Weber. William A. Bacher, producer and director, wrote the radio adaptation.

In fact, everything was there except the blossoms, which don't seem to mix with radio. For a while it looked as tho the show might run over its allotted 60 minutes, but Pierre Andre, announcer, came to the rescue. He made his closing speech, clocked for 2¾ minutes, in 90 seconds—and the Chicago Theater of the Air was off the air until next fall.

The audience was composed principally of officials and members of the Chicagoland Music Festival committee and leaders of the festival luncheon group. Dr. Edgar Nelson, general director of the festival, which is sponsored by THE TRIBUNE, was among those present. Others in the audience included Postmaster Ernest J. Kruetgen and Mrs. Kruetgen, Robert J. Dunham, president of the Chicago park board, and John Charles Gilbert, manager of the Civic Opera house and Civic theater, who himself has sung the rôle of Schubert 1,826 times.

The Fate of the Darmenys

By Elizabeth York Miller

[Copyright: 1940: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

SYNOPSIS.

Knowing she has only a few months to live, Madge Darmeny gathers her family around her to select an heir. Geoffry is her favorite nephew on her husband's side as he gets around her with his charm. Then there is Frank, another of her husband's nephews, who is unhappily married to her own niece, Leda. Frank has an 8 year old daughter, Betsy, by a former marriage. Shirley Westall is her secretary, and Amelia Pennyfather, an eavesdropping dependent relative, lives with Madge, but the others are invited for a visit. Alfred Barnes, a lifelong friend and solicitor, tells her of Geoffry's latest scrape. He has given a bad check for a diamond bracelet. Madge notices Leda with a diamond bracelet, and Leda claims it is a gift from a girl friend. Frank is furious at his wife accepting such an expensive gift, but he does not suspect Geoffry.

INSTALMENT V.

A HOME FOR ALL.

The sandy path, fringed with bracken and carpeted with pine needles, was like the cool, dim aisle of a church, and as peaceful in healing, spiritual quality. Presently Frank espied the ghost of another path diverging, now but faintly marked in the underbrush, and was tempted to turn aside and explore.

It led to the little house in the woods, the playhouse, that when they were children Gen. Darmeny had let him and Geoffry build for themselves, with considerable help of the village carpenter and mason. Some time he must show it to Betsy, altho probably it had fallen into decay by now.

He pushed on, anxious to find his friend, Dr. Westall. Shirley had warned him that her father was not so well.

Shirley . . . he smiled, thinking what a lovely creature she was, and of Betsy's rebuke when he reminded her that she had been a very plain little girl.

. . . . . .

There were so many ways in which Frank could and did irritate Madge Darmeny, and his going off like this was one of them.

She was a good stage manager and had set her scene, and she wanted all of them here, except Betsy. Betsy and Shirley were having their tea in the nursery, and going for a walk after Betsy had put in the promised hour of one-handed piano practice. Madge wanted Amelia Pennyfather present, too, for unless Amelia was let into all the family secrets it worried and fretted her until she became positively ill and harder to live with than ordinary.

When Leda—having no faint idea of what was coming—airily delivered Frank's message, a disapproving glint came into Mr. Darmeny's eyes and her lips tightened.

"I suppose," she said, "he only condescended to come to Beechbourne on account of Roger Westall. Very well, we can do without him. It really doesn't concern him very much, anyway."

Leda looked puzzled. What was it that didn't concern Frank, but concerned the rest of them?

Miss Pennyfather brought a footstool for Mrs. Darmeny, and Geoffry gallantly took it away from her and himself placed it at his aunt's feet.

Gibson carried in the massive silver tea service, and Madge Darmeny said nothing until he had arranged it and left the room.

"Perhaps you'll pour for me, Amelia?"

Miss Pennyfather leaped to the task. She had been afraid that Leda would be asked to preside.

Geoffry, sharp-eyed and critical, noticed that his aunt's hands were trembling as she clasped them in her lap.

Amelia Pennyfather noticed, too.

"Don't you want me to bring your 'drops,' dear?" she queried anxiously.

"'Drops'—what 'drops'?" Geoffry asked.

"Hold your tongue, Amelia," Madge said sharply. "Is it usual to bring medicine into a drawing room—or even mention it in conversation?"

"I'm sorry, dear," mumbled Amelia. "I only thought you looked a little faint."

Geoffry raised his eyebrows and shot a covert glance at Leda.

"We'd better have our tea before I say what I've got to say, or you mightn't have any appetite," Madge remarked ominously.

"O, dear!" gasped Leda. What on earth was coming?

Amelia poured the tea and Geoffry handed the bread and butter. They didn't seem to want anything else. Leda nibbled negligently and stared at her aunt with apprehension in her eyes. Was it going to be the daisy chain bracelet all over again?

But it wasn't. Either Madge Darmeny had forgotten the bracelet or else she was giving Leda the benefit of the doubt.

She dropped her little bombshell without any more preamble.

"The fact is," she said, "I've got to retrench. But it comes, I think, at a lucky time for all of us."

Geoffry blenched.

If her retrenchments included him, the time was anything but lucky. He hadn't a penny of his allowance coming to him until the end of September, and even then it was only half what it should be. And the money lenders were turning nasty.

"Retrench?" Leda demanded sharply. "What does that mean, exactly?"

She was getting ready to bristle; it was very stupid of her, thought Geoffry.

"It means what it sounds like," Madge replied. "Leda, you'll have to live on what Frank is willing to allow you from next quarter-day, and Geoffry, my lamb, I've got to cut you down to next to nothing."

It was Amelia Pennyfather who gasped this time. Leda was stunned, while Geoffry smiled gently, as one humoring a child.

"Poor darling, how dreadful for you," he murmured. "But just where does the luck come in?"

Mrs. Darmeny smiled gratefully at him.

"Of course you mean it's dreadful for you," she said kindly. "I've still got Beechbourne and my servants and the car and most of the horses—one can't just chuck things away when one has responsibilities. So many other people would suffer.

"But the holidays are coming on and you can share my lovely home with me—all of you. And we needn't send Betsy back to that expensive boarding school, altho Frank pays those bills. I've never approved of it. Shirley Westall is quite capable of teaching her.

"You can help me, Leda, with my little charities and social activities. You could be a great help, indeed. And you, Geoffry, can help in the management of the estate. You know I've been doing most of it, myself, since your uncle died, and it's getting a little irksome."

She paused just perceptibly, and then added quickly: "We'll be just one happy family together, and perhaps in the quiet and peace of the countryside get to know each other better, for we'll have time to become really acquainted. At least"—her voice faltered slightly—"a few months, anyway."

"But Auntie Madge, I can't possibly do that," Leda said harshly. "I'm going to Dieppe for July and to Scotland for August. We've—I've made my plans."

"You mean you and Frank?"

"O, good gracious, no. I don't know what Frank's going to do."

"And you, Geoffry?" Madge asked.

"Naturally, I'd made a few plans, too, old darling," Geoffry said casually, "but I can change them. It's charming, most generous of you to offer the paupers a home. Dashed if I can understand how you've let Leda and me sponge on you so long. I shall begin seriously to look for a job, of course."

"But isn't your job . . . here?" Madge insinuated gently.

He went over and kissed her with a convincing air of tenderness.

"My job is exactly where you want it to be," he said.

"Thank you, Geoffry, you're a brick," his aunt said. "I was sure I could depend upon you."

Leda's eyes were angry and mocking.

Tho lovers, Geoffry and she were rivals in a sense. It was Madge Darmeny's own money, and Leda was Madge's own niece. She did not so much mind sharing what spoils there were with Geoffry, but she had no intention of letting him get ahead of her and log the lot.

"I am glad you both take it so well," said Mrs. Darmeny, ignoring the fact that Leda had shown no sign of taking it at all well. "We'll discuss everything at greater length, later. I think I hear the nursery piano, and I want a word with Shirley before she goes for the day. If you will excuse me?"

Geoffry opened the door for her and kissed her again. From his manner one would suppose it was more her sorrow than his.

Amelia Pennyfather, trailing like the tail of a comet in her benefactress' wake, threw him a doglike look of adoration. Amelia, also, was Geoffry Darmeny's slave.

W-G-N PRESENTS ANNA NEAGLE IN 'IRENE' TONIGHT

British Stage's First Lady Stars with Meredith.

BY MARCIA WINN.

Anna Neagle, first lady of the British theater, believes that the charm of an actress lies in her spontaneity. But the only way to be spontaneous, she contends, is to rehearse until you are.

Miss Neagle offered this seeming paradox yesterday not as a success formula, for she believes that lies in concentration and fixity of purpose, but as one explanation for the heavy rehearsal schedule for tonight's Fifth Row Center production of Anna Neagle after plane sightseeing tour yesterday. She will appear on W-G-N tonight in "Irene."

"Irene" over W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system. She will be costarred with Burgess Meredith, distinguished American actor.

Featured in New Film.

The British actress will have the title rôle, a rôle quite familiar to her. She has just completed a Hollywood production of "Irene." "But," she pointed out as she boarded an American Airlines flagship for a tour over Chicago, "this is really my first appearance in radio drama. I must be more than familiar with it. I want to be spontaneous."

Miss Neagle has been on the stage 14 years. The daughter of a London ship captain, she considered her own name, Marjorie Robertson, too bulky, so she adopted that of her Irish mother. She started out as a dancer, soon was called "England's most perfect chorus girl," and since then has done a bit of everything from Shakespeare to Peter Pan. She has made 13 motion pictures, all produced by Herbert Wilcox, British producer, who is in Chicago with her now.

Liked Rôle of Victoria.

The rôle she liked best was that of Queen Victoria, despite the fact that it took five hours a day to put on her makeup. The most difficult rôle, she says, was that of Irene, the little shop girl. "She was so nebulous a figure," she explains, "a composite picture of so many millions of young girls, but she had to have something interesting in her to be attractive. On paper there was nothing to her. I had to try and give her vibrancy."

The prospect of facing a microphone tonight somewhat appals Miss Neagle. Every time she gets near one, she says, she remembers her first radio audition. "I opened my mouth and not a sound came out," she recalled. "Not a sound. I was mute."

This is Miss Neagle's third visit to Chicago, which she calls the most exciting city in America. She was last here in 1937.

Brother in British Navy.

"You can't thoroly enjoy your work with this happening overhead," she said, commenting on the war and on the fact that her brother, a commander in the British navy, is somewhere on the seas. "I'd give anything to be home."

Miss Neagle and Meredith met for the first time when they started rehearsals of "Irene" yesterday. Meredith arrived in Chicago in the morning, brown and fresh from a vacation on an Idaho ranch.

The production is the radio première of "Irene." It will be presented from 7 to 8 p. m.

M'NUTT URGES ROOSEVELT TO TAKE 3D TERM

Washington, D. C., May 30 (AP).—A call to President Roosevelt to accept renomination "in view of the danger to our security" was issued today by Paul V. McNutt, who has been himself a conditional candidate for the presidency.

McNutt, the Federal Security administrator and former governor of Indiana, has sought the Democratic nomination, but has said he would scrap his own aspirations if Mr. Roosevelt became a candidate. Today he issued a statement saying "the nation's welfare, now dependent upon total preparedness to avert the threat of total war, requires that President Roosevelt continue as the chief executive."

"It is true," he said, "that there are able men in both parties who are capable of directing the affairs of the nation under ordinary circumstances. But the emergency which faces us is so critical that it requires the strong leadership and wealth of experience in world affairs that the President alone can provide."

Jerusalem's First Blackout Ordered for Next Monday

JERUSALEM, May 30 (AP).—The first blackout in the history of the ancient city of Jerusalem was ordered today for next Monday. Authorities are not taking any risks regarding the inviolability of the Holy city in the matter of air raids.

BEGIN U. S. QUIZ ON PLANE PLANT POWER DAMAGE

Los Angeles, Cal., May 30 (AP).—County and federal authorities today investigated five attempts in the last 10 days to interfere with water and power supplies to three large aircraft plants making planes for the government and the allies. They sought to find out whether the acts were part of an organized sabotage plot.

The most recent act was early today. The power line to the Hawthorne city water plant was cut, stilling for five hours pumps supplying the new Northrop airplane factory and the city of Hawthorne.

Early Sunday morning the El Segundo substation of the Southern California Edison company was entered and a switch damaged. At the same time a switch was thrown on a pole at El Segundo and Sepulveda boulevards. These controled power lines to the El Segundo Northrop plant. Another power line was cut, parallel to that leading to the North American and Douglas plants, throwing a minor circuit out of commission. Investigators believe the intent was to cut the other line. A fifth incident was said by investigators to have been an attempt to cut the water supply of the North American plant.

Four Brigadier Generals Added to American Army

Washington, D. C., May 30 (AP).—President Roosevelt signed today a bill increasing the number of brigadier generals in the army from 46 to 50.

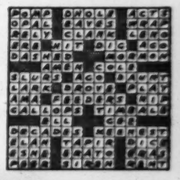
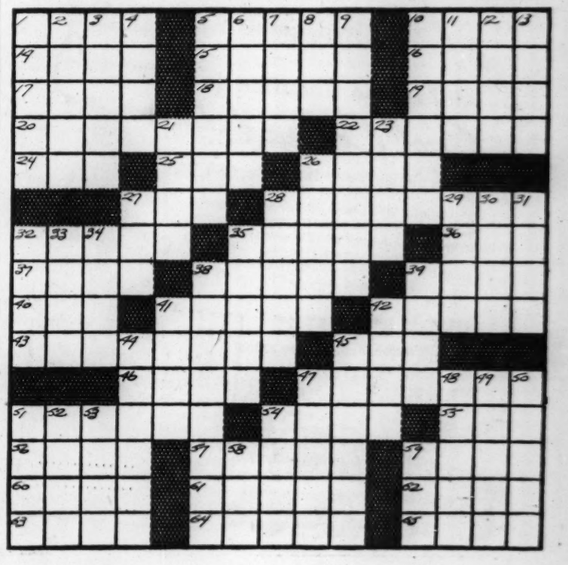
PUZZLE OF THURSDAY, MAY 30, SOLVED





THE EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY OF THE UNITED STATES

Now in Its New Home, Offers a Broader Service to Its 65,000 Policyholders in the Chicago Area

A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

THE opening today of The Equitable's new Life Assurance Service Center at 29 South La Salle Street, Chicago, makes directly available to policyholders in the Chicago area, present and future, a range of services designed to give them maximum value for their life assurance dollars.

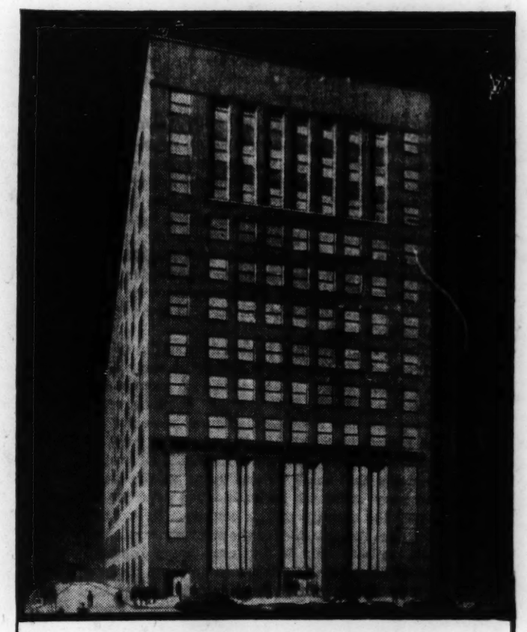
As the purposes and usefulness of life insurance have broadened, there has developed on the part of the assured a requirement for continuing service so that the policy or policies he owns may at all times most economically and effectively meet his own and his family's needs.

This service can best be rendered through personal consultation and on the basis of continuing personal contacts, because the things men and women buy life insurance for—purposes concerned with provision for old age or education of children or protection against the financial hazards of death—are highly individual and peculiarly a part of themselves.

Every policy in the Society carries with it a lifetime claim on Equitable service. If you are a member of this mutual Society and are not utilizing this service, you are overlooking something to which you are entitled, something which may add measurably to what your insurance can be made to do for you.

Now, here in Chicago, under one roof, you will find all the Society's services conveniently at hand. All departments of the Society and 500 trained service representatives in eight Equitable agencies are together in the one building. You are cordially invited to use the facilities of this new Life Assurance Service Center.

Thomas I. Parkinson
PRESIDENT



• The Equitable's New Headquarters in Chicago, Center of Life Assurance Service, will house the following departments of the Society: Cashier's and Policyholders' Service; Medical, Group, Staff, Inspection and Claims, Mortgage Loan and Real Estate; and all Equitable's Agencies in the Chicago Area. On and after May 31, 1940 premiums and other payments will be received by W. M. Echols, Cashier, 29 South La Salle Street, Chicago.

Your Equitable Agent will be glad to welcome you at the Center and explain what Life Assurance Service can mean to you; or you can obtain all information from the Policyholders' Service Department on the first floor.

DUSTING OFF AN OLD ONE.

In the final phases of the other world war and after the armistice, THE TRIBUNE undertook to feel out public sentiment on the subject of universal military training. In order not to be too brusque in the approach, the phrase "universal military education" was used as furthest removed from the idea of conscription for a peacetime army. Probably because conscription had been used to raise the A. E. F. and probably because the lessons of unpreparedness were fresh, the response to the idea was more favorable than had been anticipated. Unexpected support came from people who might have been listed in the strongest opposition.

Some of the trade union leaders gave the proposal a qualified indorsement. Many men in public affairs, including other newspaper editors, organized to present the proposition to the government, and in governmental circles both President Wilson and his secretary of war, Newton Baker, came to look on it with favor. The case for such education could be well argued then and it can be now. The arguments have even greater applicability now because then no changes which would sweep a whole world order off its foundations were in prospect.

Then it was known that, however much the map of Europe would be changed, nothing that hit at accepted conditions with anything like the demoralization certain to ensue, however this war is decided, was in store. No nation then was called upon to face a prospect or a certainty of almost complete alteration of its previous life. An exception is to be made of the Austro-Hungarian empire, which did disappear. But even that seemed only to recognize the existence of facts which had been badly assembled under the old empire. Its constituent peoples changed their relations to each other and were established in their separate national existences without much success. Germany itself was left with all the elements for a recovery of power, as no one now needs to be reminded.

This time there is no ceiling to the probabilities and there is a very shaky floor under everything. The future contains a world which won't know itself. Surviving nations will not for a long time be so complacent or so assured of what is to come.

For universal military education, or training, in the United States it was argued that the effect upon the American youth would be wholly beneficial. The conscription for service overseas had revealed many defects in the mass of young men called up. Physical examination found a larger percentage of them unfit than was good for the national well being and a great many who could be made fit were benefited by the treatment they received. It was argued, truthfully, that the discipline would be beneficial to the character and the disposition of boys who were taught correct habits of posture, proper mental attitude toward community life, a sense of responsibility, and a higher degree of understanding of what it takes to fit into an orderly society. They would be taught a patriotism which was not merely sentimental and the best sentiments of nationality would be increased.

Out of such a system would come not only the reserves of a citizen army prepared to respond to a national call but out of it would come better citizens. The chances that these trained reserves would be called upor for military duty would be lessened by the fact that they were available. The country would not have to start from scratch every time it needed an army, and the general knowledge of its ability to put troops in the field might make it unnecessary to do so. In every war in which the United States has been engaged the enemy has relied too much upon the apparent unmilitary character of the American people. The war potentialities of the country have been too much discounted for the good of the enemy and the good of the United States.

This old subject is dusted off and presented again, not in the expectation that it will make progress at once, but here is an idea that is worth more consideration now than it had in 1918 and thereabouts. Out of the older proposition several advantages flowed. The military training of high school students was a by-product, and the civilian training camps obtained an incentive which has resulted in their permanence as a valuable auxiliary to the professional army. The civilian is taking a greater interest in military affairs and altho no one wishes to overestimate what can be done in a short time, even with the most intelligent and willing volunteers, we have a better military base now than we had in 1917.

In the system of universal training there are great national benefits both for civilian life and for emergency. What is going on at Washington these days reveals how uncertainly the future world is regarded and how willing the country is to provide for national security. THE TRIBUNE again offers for consideration the subject of giving the young men of this nation, for a period to be determined, training in military discipline and military duties.

THE ROOSEVELT PARADOX.

The impact of the war has revealed anew the paradox which is Mr. Roosevelt.

By temperament he is a collectivist, tho not an intellectually courageous one. He thinks that the way to make everybody happy and prosperous is to let the goverment run everybody and everything, but he has permitted himself to believe that this can be accomplished without the loss of industrial efficiency and without employing ugly measures of coercion. This is dangerous nonsense, but it happens to be Mr. Roosevelt's creed and it has controled a good deal of his action.

Because he is a collectivist, Mr. Roosevelt has surrounded himself with men who share his faith in a centralized government to boss the national economy. They are not all parlor pinks like him. He found it easy, convenient, and politically profitable to ally himself with the communists, and the alliance persisted thru the 1938 elections, and was broken only after the Stalin-Hitler pact was signed.

Some important positions and many minor but influential ones in the administration went to Mr. Roosevelt's communist allies. Mr. Browder himself has described the intimate relations of his party with the New Deal. He made it clear that he was in a position to offer counsel and to have it accepted. Communist influence in trade unions in critical industries is large. Thru Mme. Perkins, and especially thru the labor board, Mr. Roosevelt has advanced the communists to positions of power in ocean shipping, steel, motors, power, and other key industries.

The soviet foreign policy is now out of favor in Washington, and perhaps Mr. Roosevelt wishes that he hadn't placed the members of the party and the fellow travelers in a position where they can sabotage his foreign policy. If so, the thought may have come too late.

So much for Mr. Roosevelt the collectivist. He is also a product of the eastern seaboard, and shares many of its snobbish attitudes. The self-appointed aristocracy wants to rush pell-mell into war. There is no lack of evidence that Mr. Roosevelt feels the same way about it, but his management of the nation's affairs has been such that the country is utterly unprepared to face the responsibilities he would thrust upon it.

The army is poorly equipped and, as has been noted, the reliability of industry is questionable. Mr. Roosevelt has managed to weaken the financial power of the nation by his extravagance and its governmental efficiency by his fifth column appointments. He is still the parlor pink and, accordingly, he does not see clearly the sources of weakness which he has introduced into our economy and our government. Even if he could see it all clearly and had the will to clean house—which he has not—a considerable time would be required to strip this country for the action for which Mr. Roosevelt's social set is clamoring.

MR. DEWEY AT DALLAS.

Mr. Dewey's speech at Dallas on national defense was remarkable for candor and clear expression. Mr. Dewey was forthright in declaring his sympathy with England and France in the war and equally forthright in opposing American participation in the struggle. The foreign policy which he favors is made up of two principal tenets: the avoidance of foreign entanglements and the reaffirmation of the Monroe Doctrine. He would prepare the army and navy to make these policies effective.

The speech was not intended primarily to be a reply to Mr. Roosevelt's address to the nation on Sunday night, but it served to expose the President's loose and wishful thinking. Mr. Dewey had only to quote the figures presented by the responsible officers of the army and navy to destroy the impression which the President sought to create that the 7 billions spent on the army and navy under his leadership had gone far to assure the security of this country. In fact, as Maj. Gen. Arnold chief of the army air corps, had said, we have only 52 first class heavy bombers and of the total of 2,700 planes on hand, perhaps half a dozen could be modernized to meet the combat conditions found on the western front. So far as rifles, tanks, antiaircraft, and antitank guns are concerned, the situation is no better.

Mr. Dewey reminded his audience that a blueprint is not an airplane, much less 50,000 airplanes. The way to speed rearmament, he said with eminent good sense, is to find out what you want and then entrust the building of it to competent men, unhampered by restrictive New Deal legislation.

The speech disclosed again Mr. Dewey's capacity for clear analysis which is the able executive's first need. He showed that he knows how to go about solving a difficult problem, directly and speedily.

Editorial of the Day

THE CENTRAL COUNT.

[Cincinnati Enquirer.]

At its first trial in an election other than by proportional representation, the central count has not made a particularly good impression. This results from the fact that it took distinctly longer than the old system of counting ballots in the precincts. Nevertheless, the central counting plan has shown enough advantages to warrant its use, as has been decided upon.

The main object of the central count is not to hasten the tally of ballots but to insure honesty and accuracy. We can be certain that it accomplishes this purpose, for the conditions under which a central count is made reduce greatly the temptation and possibility of both dishonesty and honest error.

As for speed in counting the ballots, while it is not particularly important, it can be achieved even with a central count. Some of the teams at Music hall in the count Tuesday night and Wednesday made very rapid progress.

Had all the personnel for that count been chosen with due regard to proficiency for the work, the count would have been much more rapid. And even if the personnel actually used there had been trained to the methods prescribed for counting, the work would have moved faster.

The central count insures an absolute minimum of opportunity for fraud. It reduces the probability of mere error to a very low point. And it does not need to entail an extra day of counting if it is organized with sufficient care and staffed with competent personnel.

MR. PEPYS ON WINE TASTING.

31st May—Was invited to a champagne tasting the day before the holiday, but did refrain from attending for I did go to such a sipping party a year ago and meseemed that I went on tasting champagne for weeks afterward. Now these occasions are solemn assemblies of the scholars of the Wine and Food society, by which they hope to improve their palates and become adepts at choosing vintages; and they go about it much in earnest.

They have many small tables on which stand bottles of various brands, but the labels have been removed, and the bottles are marked only with numbers. The members pass from one table to another, tasting freely, and chatting the while, and after they have reached the third or fourth table the conversation becomes lively. An hour or two is passed in this way, and toasts are drunk and jokes are cracked, but the tasters never forget that it is a serious business, and are eager to nip here and sip there. Then they vote, and prizes are declared; and perhaps the bottles are happy to have ribbons pinned on them, but the man who is sales agent for the winning bottle is even happier.

All the while I sat quietly in a downstairs corner of my club, watching the connoisseurs descend; and some of them swayed like great trees in a wind, and faces that had been gloomy for weeks because of the war news were wreathed with smiles. I did ask how the contest ended, and was told there was general consternation at the result and the Wine and Food society was wondering if it ought to disband. A nonvintage brand had won, and the science of wine tasting had gone back to the dark ages.

A TRACK MEET THRILL.

It wasn't the pole vaulters soaring
Like swallows riding a breeze—
Not hurdlers clipping the barriers
With consummate grace and ease;
For I have seen many as good as
And even much better than these.

Tho this and the rest had color,
Suspense and drama as part
In the picture of youngsters competing
With sportsmanship, fitness and heart—
The thrill that was really the finest
Came right at the very start:

That silent moment we stood there,
And watched while the flag unfurled—
Just glad we were where we were,
In a hell of a hell of a world.

Another Sharpshooter at the Bridge.

The southwest pylon of the Michigan avenue bridge affords another target for sharpshooters at inaccuracies, viz., the tablet commemorating La Salle. Despite the sponsorship of the Chicago Historical society and the Illinois Society of Colonial Dames, La Salle's name is recorded as Robert Réné Cavalier, whereas the Britannica and New International spell it Cavelier. The same spelling Caveller is found in Parkman's "La Salle," and he quotes it from the birth records of Rouen in 1643: "A été baptisé Robert Cavelier," etc.

Marse Henry on Jowl and Greens.

I am sure that you will reopen the "hog jowl and greens" controversy in order to record the testimony of that great epicure of the southland, Marse Henry Watterson. In one of my old scrapbooks I recently ran across the inclosed, clipped from the Louisville Courier-Journal 30 years ago:

"Real pot-licker, the only variety worthy of discussion, is distilled—preferably in an iron kettle over wood fire—from hog jowl and wild greens. It gets from the jowl the flavor of clover leaves and dew imparted to that part of the pig's anatomy during happy hours of grazing in rich pastures. There is also a suggestion of the fragrant leaves of the sassafras bushes and the nutlike quality of flint corn. The commingled essence of wild greens—dandelion leaves, lambs' quarter, pepper grass, and a dozen other varieties—with a bouquet added by the penetrant wood smoke that envelopes the pot in which the greens caress the jowl, make the true pot-licker of the south ambrosial to both the 'houn' dawg' and the twins."

Routed by this valiant specter).

Raise your glass to debt's physician,

May he grow with fearsome vigor
Ever ghostlier and bigger!
And since now I'm briefly free
Of creditors, this one's on me.

Landscape in Rain.

The checkerboard fields roll gently before me, emerald and ebony as far as eye can see. The silver rain dances along the hilltop, and hangs a filmy veil before the woods. The distant trees seem to catch the mist about them, as a dancer holds her scarf, standing tiptoe in beauty and grace. The patter of the rain in the thick leaves overhead is a song—a song of living, of beauty, of purpose.

EPILEPSY FROM PRESSURE WITHIN THE SKULL.

In ancient times epilepsy was thought to be due to a demon—"trapped within the skull." While baleful influences—spells—could be cast out of the heart, the lungs, or the abdomen—with suitable charms and conjurations—far more drastic measures were required when the brain was thought to be involved. The best way to get rid of the evil was to resort to trephining—removing a disc of bone. While we cannot say positively that the procedure was always carried out for the disease—prehistoric skulls have been discovered from which circles of bone measuring one and one-half inches in diameter have been abstracted. It is related that the famous Chinese surgeon, Hoatho—in the third century—was an adept at this operation.

That this plan is not so weird is proved by the fact that modern surgery is able to assist many of those who are suffering from periodical convulsions thru a careful study of the brain itself—searching for tumors, clots of blood, or other sources of pressure.

Great progress has been made in the management of "falling sickness"—particularly by Pollock and his associates, who have shown us the way to the rational use of bromides. But from a curative point of view the possibility that a mass may be present should always be considered, as it is well known that squeezing certain areas may be responsible for these paroxysms.

It was Benjamin W. Dudley of Lexington, Ky., who—more than 100 years ago—reported several victims who responded to surgery. One of his patients—a young man of 23—was kicked by a horse when he was 5 years of age. The left side of the head was left somewhat depressed. At about the age of 15, the first spasmodic attack occurred. He was afflicted every week or so thereafter until Dudley extracted the bone—with a perfect result. Intelligence returned and no further signs of the disorder were noted.

We have long been aware that the so-called Jacksonian type begins with contractions of one particular group of muscles, which soon spread to other parts of the body when a generalized seizure comes on. The assumption is that if the trigger starter can be located and eliminated the cause will no longer exist. Literally thousands of cases are now on record confirming the efficacy of the method.

A 41 year old woman exhibited trouble for about a year. As far as critical observations could determine her bouts were characteristic of epilepsy. Examination, however, revealed a tumor in the fore part of the brain. Later, the foreign body was taken out intact. This was nearly two years ago and there has been no recurrence.

We must also think of the possibility of an abscess, particularly in children who have encountered running ears or who have faced a stormy time with some infection. Free drainage, with the easing of tension, may be followed by the disappearance of symptoms.

Occasionally a blood clot subsequent to a blow or a fall will be sizable enough to produce evidence of irritation, and here again release of pressure is one of the triumphs of present day medicine. A 25 year old workman was apparently none the worse for an accident which he had sustained in childhood. A few months ago he was seized with what seemed to be typical epilepsy. Here again the source was traced to the old well-nigh forgotten mishap. On opening the cranium, a thick, fibrous lump was disclosed. It had been formed by the bleeding of years before and was extricated without the slightest difficulty. The chances are that he, too, will be entirely immune from untoward manifestations hereafter.

Unfortunately, the brain may be the focus of an injury and—altho symptoms may not appear immediately—in certain individuals they will come on later. With the help of X-ray shadow pictures much information may be secured. These—together with other indications of localized crowding—will give the physician a clew as to place and size of the growth.

HOME PASTEURIZATION.

S. H. writes: We are going away for the summer and must pasteurize our own milk. How should this be done?

REPLY.

Heat the milk to a temperature of 154 degrees Fahrenheit and hold the fluid at that level for approximately 30 minutes. This does not destroy the flavor, but will kill all living bacteria [or the spores]. The process may be carried out in a double boiler, using a long stemmed thermometer. If you approach 150 degrees, this will suffice—but the time period must be at least one-half hour.

RUPTURE.

C. H writes: At what age is it advisable to have a ruptured navel in a child operated on?

REPLY.

In some cases the parts may be held in place with a pressure pad, secured with strips of adhesive. As growth advances the opening may close. This cannot be relied upon, however. If safety permits the matter may be postponed until the child is at least 2 years old, but this must be decided by your physician. If there is danger that a loop of bowel will strangulate [twist or kink], delay should not be risked.

CONJUNCTIVITIS.

R. R. writes: Is vernal conjunctivitis contagious?

REPLY.

Not when caused by sensitivity. Should bacteria be responsible, the organisms may be spread.

FINDS WE HAVE NO SALES TAX.

Chicago, May 28.—In Herlihy Mid-Continent company vs. Nudelman, the Supreme court of Illinois said:

"The tax imposed by the retailers' occupational tax is not a privilege tax imposed upon purchasers, like the motor fuel tax. It is not a property tax upon the items sold; nor is it a sales tax. But it is an occupation tax upon a class of vendors and is measured by the gross receipts from their sales."

In other words, we have no sales tax in Illinois, but we have a tax, known as the retailers' occupational tax, which is a tax upon the seller of an item and not upon the buyer of the same. Yet there is much confusion over the collection of the same from people who purchase tangible personal property at retail, not for resale. Some merchants charge their customers the tax, while others absorb it. The tavern keeper doesn't collect the tax when a customer of his purchases a drink for 15 cents or more. The restaurant keeper collects a cent on a 15 cent meal ticket. My contention is that since a purchaser of any commodity indirectly pays the seller's rent, clerical hire, light bill, etc., the seller should add the tax to the price of a commodity before he quotes the price to a customer and not afterward.

The seller of retail goods must account to and pay to the state of Illinois 3 per cent of the gross receipts of his sales, or else be liable civilly and criminally to the state.

In People of the State of Illinois vs. Cooper the Supreme court said:

"A criminal statute may not rest upon an uncertain foundation, and a statute which either forbids or requires the doing of an act in terms so vague that men of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application, violates the first essential of due process of law."

Article II., section 2 of the constitution of Illinois provides:

"No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law."

Therefore, since money is property, when sellers of tangible personal property charge their customers additional moneys above the purchase price of the goods they sell, they are taking property without due process of law. And they should be enjoined from so illegally collecting additional moneys above the price of any tangible personal property they offer for sale.

CHICAGO'S MILK AND GOOD MILK.

Chicago, May 28. — Before the last echoes of the milk strike have died away, might a mere consumer say a word about the product itself as it is delivered to us here in Chicago? There must have been others besides myself lucky enough to obtain some decent milk and cream from Wisconsin. Good, rich milk and cream, not a bit like that lacteal fluid [heavy accent on the first syllable] which we are told here in Chicago is up to standard. Who set that standard, may I ask?

People in Wisconsin and Iowa say they can whip the cream that rises to the top of their milk. A few great minds set a "standard" here. I'd like to set them down to a piece of strawberry short cake and two pitchers of cream to choose from—one from Wisconsin's dairy and the other the stuff that passes for cream here in the city of Chicago.

A WORD FOR THE INDIAN.

Chicago, May 27.—It has been said that the "only good Indian is a dead one." The motion picture industry seems to have changed this to "the only good Indian is a bad one."

Two recent films—"Geronimo" and "Northwest Passage"—portray the Indians as savages, without presenting in any way the Indian's side of the story. "Geronimo" was particularly offensive because of the advertising used in connection with the picture, and because it was not historically correct in certain instances. "Northwest Passage" does not have the fairness of the book, which states the historic facts that Indians learned to scalp from the white man, and that he was driven to many of the actions of war or incited to carry on such acts by the English or French who set a good example in cruel methods of warfare.

All other races and nationalities have protested pictures that exploit members of their group in such a way as to arouse racial prejudice. Many of them have succeeded in securing regulations that prohibit such representations. Why cannot the Indian receive this same consideration. The story of the Indian girl, Sacagawea, who guided the Lewis and Clark expedition, would be as thrilling as "Northwest Passage" and would show an Indian contribution of service to this country.

It must be great to have a fine Christian spirit that will lead us to enjoy the prospects of such a spectacle.

RISING CRITICISM HITS PRESIDENT'S NEW TAX SCHEME

Boost in Debt Limit Also Is Attacked.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 30.—Criticism of the administration's $656,000,000 a year tax program as a makeshift revenue measure mounted in congress today.

The bill, drafted by the house ways and means committee, was dropped into the hopper late today. It provides for a flat 10 per cent increase in corporation and individual income taxes, and increases in the levies upon liquor, beer, cigarets, gasoline, and other internal revenue taxes.

The receipts from these tax increases will be earmarked to retire in five years the three billions in "defense bonds" which are to be issued by the treasury. The measure also calls for an increase in the statutory debt limit from 45 billions to 48 billions.

One-Year Limit Sought.

Sentiment was growing, however, to confine the life of the taxes to one year. In the meanwhile congress would have an opportunity to revise the entire tax structure to extract an additional billion or more dollars yearly from the taxpayers' pockets to pay for the huge government spending.

In both houses there was criticism of the raising of the debt limit. Senator Harry F. Byrd [D., Va.] declared that the administration was taking advantage of the war crisis to increase the national debt beyond the limit set by congress. The President had previously avoided the debt limit issue because this is an election year.

Representative Everett M. Dirksen [R., Ill.], member of the house appropriations committee, termed the new tax bill "a slap-dash shotgun tax bill."

"The events in Europe," Dirksen said, "patently indicate that the task before us is to train, prepare, and coordinate a nation for any emergency. It is not a temporary task. The President's request for large outlays indicates that we must undertake a long range program.

Warns of Future Problems.

"The suggested program not only completely ignores our present enormous deficit but also fails to take account of future outlays which are certain to come. Now is the time for sound tax revision and the establishment of a broad tax basis which will be equal to future demands."

Senator Byrd asserted after a closed session of the senate finance committee that there is no justification for the proposed 3 billion dollar increase in the statutory debt limit.

Daniel W. Bell, undersecretary of the treasury, told the committee that, on the basis of appropriations so far made and recommended, the treasury will have a total of 1 billion dollars in cash and unused borrowing capacity by Feb. 1, 1941. This calculation does not include the new armaments appropriation of more than 1 billion dollars which President Roosevelt will request tomorrow, but neither does it include the new taxes proposed to be levied.

"Thus it is clear," said Senator Byrd, "that congress will have time to consider whether it is necessary to raise the debt limit when it meets in January."

Assails Segregation Scheme.

He denounced the administration's proposal to segregate national defense appropriations from ordinary government expenditures for the purpose of justifying a 3 billion dollar increase in the debt limit.

"The purpose is to confuse the public mind," he said. "The public is told that the national defense program makes it necessary to increase the debt limit. But we would have gone over the debt limit by the end of the next fiscal year without the emergency national defense appropriations."

As an emergency expedient pending an overhauling of the whole tax structure next year, Senator Byrd proposed to provide 1 billion dollars for the national defense by slashing all other appropriations 10 per cent, by levying a 10 per cent retroactive supertax on 1939 individual and corporate incomes, and by increasing miscellaneous internal revenue taxes 10 per cent, effective July 1.

New York, May 30 (AP).—William Guggenheim, 71 year old retired industrialist, called today for the resignation of President Roosevelt.

In a letter to Representative Bruce Barton [R., N. Y.], he declared:

"That we will get a different leadership in the fall following the elections, there can be no doubt, but why waste six months in a situation which, though not desperate, is gravely unfortunate? Our administration is not respected either at home or abroad.

"The conflagration abroad is the result of the stupid leadership that guided England and France for the past years. The one way to avoid it reaching our shores is to have the nation's leaders respected. An immediate transition can only be accomplished by President Roosevelt's resignation—that I ask for as an American citizen. I hope that President Roosevelt will be as patriotically impressed by the necessities of the hour as I am."

NEW DEAL ACTS TO AVERT BRAKE ON BUROCRACIES

It Fights Consideration of Walter-Logan Bill.

BY CHESLY MANLY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 30.—Senate administration leaders, seeking to prevent action on the Walter-Logan administrative law bill, today argued that a war crisis confronts the nation and that there is no time for the consideration of such legalistic technical measures which the people do not understand.

Sen. Carl A. Hatch.

The Walter-Logan bill, which the house has passed by a 3 to 1 vote, is intended to halt the usurpation of authority by federal regulatory boards and commissions, whose regulations and orders it would place under strict judicial supervision.

Proponents of the measure sought to obtain some agreement to bring it before the senate, but after hours of stormy debate the leadership succeeded in bringing up instead the Walsh-Vinson naval expansion bill, authorizing an 11 per cent increase of the fleet at a cost of 655 million dollars.

Trio Leads Fight.

Senator Carl A. Hatch [D., N. M.], Senator Pat McCarran [D., Nev.], and Senator Henry F. Ashurst [D., Ariz.], chairman of the judiciary committee, led the fight to make a place on the senate's program for the Walter-Logan bill. Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley [D., Ky.], leading the fight against it, declared:

"I have a feeling that the United States of America is not so much concerned about the passage of a law that will give the courts the right to administer our departments or determine how they shall be administered. Certainly the American people are not so much concerned with that legalistic, technical situation in the departments of our government as they are now with our domestic and international situation growing out of the world war.

"In view of the necessity and the urgency and the demand on the part of the American people that we carry out our defense program from the military and naval standpoint, it seems to me it is certainly inappropriate at this time to insinuate that somebody, thru caprice or whim or thru a desire to block a vote upon this measure, is arranging a program deliberately designed to prevent the consideration of the Walter-Logan bill."

Senator Ashurst's Reply.

"I have not insinuated that there was an attempt to prevent a vote," said Senator Ashurst. "I have charged that there is an attempt to prevent a vote.

"The senator says we are going to prepare. I am with him on that—prepare to take care of the liberty of the American people. But of what purpose is it on the one hand to expend billions in taking care of the liberty of the American people and then, by silent attrition, by secrecy, by processes of which the citizen has no knowledge, take away the very liberty we are going to try to save?

"All the Walter-Logan bill does is to say that the person whose property or whose liberty is about to be taken away shall have a right to be heard and be confronted with the witnesses and to appeal to the courts.

"The English government has recently established a dictatorship, out of necessity; but it will be a long time before the English government or any other government sets up dictatorships such as we have in some of the bureaus."

RIVALRY OF UNIONS HELD HANDICAP TO DEFENSE PROGRAM

Washington, D. C., May 30 [Special].—Rivalry between competing unions in the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations may handicap the nation's defense program unless the dispute raging about President Roosevelt's appointment of Sidney Hillman to the advisory commission on national defense is settled satisfactorily, it was reported in labor circles today.

The interunion rivalry is said to be most keen in the aircraft, shipping, and metal trades industries, vital arms of the national defense.

Criticism of the Hillman appointment continued in A. F. of L. quarters today. John P. Frey, president of the federation's metal trades department, said it was "very much like appointing an artificial flower maker to take charge of a gang of boilermakers."

Determination of the C. I. O. to push its organization of the aircraft industry is regarded by the A. F. of L.'s International Association of Machinists as tantamount to a declaration of labor war. The machinists' union is also in conflict with the C. I. O.'s United Radio and Electrical and Machine Workers' union, which affects the machine tool building industry and the electrical manufacturing industries.

C. I. O. WORKERS ON 4 WARSHIPS VOTE TO STRIKE

Kearny, N. J., May 30 (AP).—Union employés of the Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock company, where two destroyers and two cruisers are under construction for the navy, voted to strike. About 6,000 workmen will be affected.

John Dempsey, president of local 16 of the C. I. O. Industrial Union of Maritime and Shipworkers of America, said 5,000 workers voted to strike after he and other leaders had urged them to delay action pending negotiations.

Workers ask 10 cents an hour wage increase, Dempsey said. The existing contract expired last night and the company, the union head declared, offered a 2½ to 4 cents an hour increase. Dempsey said the company would close the plant tomorrow.

Construction on two destroyers is 25 per cent complete and keels were recently laid for the cruisers.

Stowaways on U. S. Ships Face Year's Imprisonment

Washington, D. C., May 30 (AP).—Congress has voted to impose penalties up to a $500 fine and a year's imprisonment on stowaways caught aboard ships in American waters.

DEWEY RETURNS FROM DIXIE TRIP CLAIMING GAINS

New York, May 30 [Special].—District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey today returned from a five day campaign tour of the south, convinced that he had made considerable strides in lining up southern delegates favorable to his presidential candidacy at the Republican national convention.

Dewey forces contend he made serious inroads into the support previously claimed for United States Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio in the south. They contend that the 26 member Texas delegation is by no means in the Taft column, that Dewey would get a majority of the 13 Alabama votes, and that the Louisiana delegation at least was not unfriendly.

In reply to opponents, who say Dewey's candidacy has been seriously impaired since the German invasion of the Low Countries, Dewey supporters say his delegate strength is growing stronger every day. They contend that since that time Idaho, with eight delegates, has indorsed Dewey; that 14 Dewey and two unpledged delegates have been elected in Washington; seven out of eight delegates in Montana have announced for Dewey; the four delegates-at-large in Kentucky were instructed for him, and five Dewey delegates out of six were elected in Wyoming. Dewey will leave next Thursday night for Charlestown, W. Va., and another southern tour.

MEASURE FOR BIG HOSPITAL GRANTS WINS IN SENATE

60 Million Dollar Program Now Up to House.

Washington, D. C., May 30 (AP).—The senate passed and sent to the house today legislation to provide a six-year, $60,000,000 program of federal-state-local hospital construction.

Designed to increase hospital facilities primarily in rural and "economically depressed areas," the bill contemplates federal construction of hospitals to be leased to states or communities and also grants for state and local construction.

Called Valuable Experiment.

Senator James E. Murray [D., Mont.], in charge of the bill on the senate floor, said it would be a valuable experiment which would increase existing facilities by an estimated 25,000 or 30,000 hospital beds.

The bill was approved on a voice vote without objection.

First recommended in a message by President Roosevelt to congress, the measure would authorize a $10,000,000 appropriation for the year ending July 1, 1941. During each of the five years following $10,000,000 more would be authorized for grants to states and localities for construction and training of personnel.

Restrictions on Grants.

These grants could not exceed 90 per cent nor be less than 25 per cent of the construction cost, exclusive of the cost of the site.

The hospitals to be built and leased by the federal government would be constructed by the federal works agency upon application by a state or community. Approval of a national advisory hospital council, created by the bill, would be required.

TOMORROW IS LAST DAY TO PAY TAXES WITHOUT PENALTY

Tomorrow is the last day for Cook county taxpayers to pay their 1939 tax bills without penalty, Treasurer John Toman warned yesterday. The treasurer's office will stay open until 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon to receive payments.

Payments made after tomorrow are subject to a penalty of 1 per cent a month, or each part of a month they are overdue. Real estate bills may be paid in two instalments without penalty, half by tomorrow and the second half by Sept. 1.

Assessor John S. Clark announced yesterday that mailing of 1940 personal property tax schedules to residents of Chicago will begin Monday. Delivery of schedules to Cook county residents outside the city has been completed. Clark warned taxpayers they must return the schedules to his office within 20 days after they have been received. Those who are late in filing or who fail to file returns are subject to a 50 per cent penalty.

WEATHER REPORT A FAIR GUIDE TO MARKET PRICES

Thermometer's Ups and Downs Affect Cost.

BY MARY MEADE.

No homemaker would think of looking at the weather forecast to find out whether the price of green beans will be up or down the next day—but it's not such a crazy idea as it sounds. Most of this week's price ups and downs on the green grocer's shelves are due to the weather.

That cold weather and bad growing conditions cause a shortage of vegetables is easy to understand, but there is more to it than that. Homemakers plan their menus according to the weather. When it's warm they serve more salads and buy more greens. But when it's cool, as it has been this last week, they serve vegetable vitamins in cooked form and buy carrots, cauliflower, peas and beans. That's a big part of the reason why these four items are higher this week. When everybody buys vegetables for cooking, the price goes up, while salad vegetables become cheaper. Greens, of all kinds and tomatoes are cheaper this week.

Lettuce Becomes Scarce.

The one exception is head lettuce of the iceberg variety. It's between seasons for this almost staple vegetable and scarcity has sent the price climbing. But there is leaf lettuce aplenty and another variety of head lettuce known as "Big Boston" [it comes from Missouri] available. Both are reasonably priced.

You can't beat cabbage or spinach if you're looking for something easy on the budget. Spinach comes in the big broad leaved variety and cabbage heads are solid and tender. Use them in salads and cooked dishes. They're as good a buy from the quality standpoint as they are from the price, and that's saying quite a lot.

Tomato Prices Tumble.

It's not quite the same thing as being able to run out to the garden to pick a fat sun warmed tomato from the vine, but it's the next best thing to be able to get field grown tomatoes at really reasonable prices. The price of "love apples" has plummeted and is selling at a reasonable level for the first time this year. Bunch beets and what broccoli there is, are both cheaper, too.

Asparagus is scarcer and a little higher this week-end. So, too, are celery and dry onions. Carrots, cauliflower, cucumbers [particularly the best quality cucumbers], green peas and potatoes of all kinds are somewhat higher. There is a wide range in the quality and price of green beans. The best beans are higher, but they've been so cheap that this shouldn't be such bad news. Green onions and radishes are excellent buys.

Pineapple Season Is On!

Get out the preserving kettle—the fresh pineapple season is on. Recipes for pineapple conserve, pineapple preserves and pinecot jam are included in "Mary Meade's Best Jams and Jellies" [price 20 cents; 23 cents by mail]. Directions for canning pineapple and making juice from the leftover cores, eyes and skin are to be found in "Homemaker's Guide to Canning," [price 5 cents; 7 cents, by mail]. These booklets are on sale at The Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street, and in The Tribune Tower lobby. Please address your mail requests to Mary Meade.

Pineapple prices are reasonable and compare favorably with last year's prices.

The season's first plums came to market this week. As luxury fruits go, they're quite reasonable. Honeydew and honeyball melons, raspberries in half pint boxes and very nice California cantaloupes are all available. They're not in season yet, and all are rather high priced.

Apples Are High.

Apples and grapefruit are about gone. Neither is of very good quality and apples are very high. Oranges are a little higher this week. Most of them are coming from California. Strawberries are a little higher, but they're of excellent quality. Sweet cherries are fairly reasonable for this early in the season and rhubarb is a good buy.

Over at the meat counter it's pork loins, veal in all varieties of cuts, and beef cuts from the forequarter that are making bargain news. Beefsteaks are fairly reasonable and so are rib roasts. Beef pot roasts from the chuck are a good buy.

HERBS RETURNING TO FASHION VIA THE SALAD BOWL

Greens Still Are Main Basis of Dish.

BY RUTH COOK.

Herbs are coming back into fashion. They're coming back via the salad bowl. And there should be nothing so unusual in that, because it was in salads that herbs found their first culinary use.

Nobody knows whether the first salad was a juicy green herb nibbled by some caveman or whether the credit for discovery goes to Nebuchadnezzar.

Athenaeus mentions salad and herbs in his description of an attic banquet, and this 16th century salad sounds like one you might expect to be served at dinner tonight: "Salat cut small with salt upon it and moistened with oil of olives put forth out of a vessel with a long neck, and with vinaigre—and chopped herbs."

Greens and Herbs True Basis.

Salads of greens and herbs still are the true salads. Other concoctions of fruit, whipped cream and nutmeats, come under that heading, but they serve their purpose best as the main piece at a bridge table and have no place in a man size dinner menu. Fruit, meat, fish, and vegetables may be added to green salads, but greens should be the chief ingredient.

The choice of herbs for your salad depends mainly on the blandness or flavorsomeness of the other ingredients. Mild flavored greens require light and subtle spicing. Strong flavored vegetables can take a heavier seasoning. Herbs and spices are overworked when called upon to mask the flavor of salad. Their job is to accent flavors already in the salad.

Because the amount of herbs used should be small and also because fresh herbs are not readily available to the majority of homemakers, herbs generally are added to the salad by mixture with the salad dressing. A simple oil and vinegar dressing is best as a base. This one is easily made and should be made fresh on the spot. If you like, the oil may be sprinkled on the vegetables before they are tossed in the seasoned vinegar. They receive a coating to protect them from being wilted by the vinegar when treated in this way. Use a good cider or wine vinegar—good ingredients make the salad dressing. Lemon juice may be used in place of vinegar in fish or fruit salads.

BASIC FRENCH DRESSING.

- 1 cup fine olive oil
- ¼ cup vinegar
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon white pepper [optional]

Stir or beat ingredients together until emulsified.

The following herbal variations are merely a suggestion. You will want to work out your own combinations. Only remember that no seasoning at all is better than over-seasoning and that the sense of taste becomes confused when there is too much variety in seasoning. One member of the onion family and one herb is usually enough.

Seasoning Variations.

GARLIC: A garlic accent is tastetempting; accent on garlic is disgusting, so go slowly when you use this member of the onion family. You may use a cut whole clove of garlic, rubbing the bowl thoroly with it before putting in the greens, or use garlic in one of the following three forms:

Garlic Salt: In this mixture of garlic and table salt the strong flavor of the garlic is diluted with salt. When using it cut down on the salt in the recipe.

Garlic Juice: Bottled garlic juice which is odorless after use, now is on the market. A few drops added to the dressing will take the place of rubbing the bowl with a whole clove.

Garlic Vinegar: Cider vinegar flavored with garlic may be purchased ready bottled or made at home by adding garlic to any good vinegar. Just substitute the flavored vinegar for the plain vinegar.

Onions in the Salad.

ONION: All members of the onion family find their way into salads sooner or later. Thin slices of white onions may be steeped in the vinegar which is used to make the dressing, or onion salt may be used for part of the salt in the dressing recipe. Bottled onion juice may be added to the dressing.

Chives: Finely minced fresh chives add a delicate onion flavor to a salad. Toss the minced chives with the other greens or add to dressing. They add color and give character to fruit salads.

Green onion: Green onion tops may be used exactly as are chives. The bulbs of the onion may be sliced and added to salads, too.

MARJORAM: This herb of the mint family can be bought in powdered form. Add to dressing and use it on fruit salads and salad containing meat or poultry. It has a delicate flavor which is lost if used with too strongly flavored greens and herbs.

TARRAGON: Use this herb in dry form to make tarragon flavored vinegar. To make tarragon vinegar, steep one part tarragon in two parts strong vinegar; cover closely and let stand one week before straining. A very little of this romantic herb is excellent with fruit salads and improves the flavor of almost any green salad. Ready prepared tarragon vinegar is available.

BASIL: Sweet basil finds a place in any salad containing tomatoes or fish. Heat the basil in vinegar or use a ready prepared basil flavored vinegar.

PARSLEY: Minced fresh parsley is mouthwatering addition to any salad. You can use plenty of it. Dehydrated minced parsley which retains its bright green color can be purchased in cans. Add it to the salad dressing and it will perk up like fresh parsley.

Spread Buttered Chives on Toasted Hard Rolls

Finely chopped chives blended with softened butter is a delicious spread for toasted hard rolls. Try serving them as an accompaniment to the luncheon salad, or spread the mixture on crisp crackers for a tasty snack between meals.

CABBAGE SALAD LENDS ITSELF TO VARIATIONS

Here's 2 Ways to Use Cole Slaw.

There's nothing like cole slaw when you're looking for a salad to accompany dinner. In addition, cabbage salad takes to variations agreeably. Here are two new things to do with your cabbage slaw—one recipe puts it into jellied grape juice, the other spruces it up with a grand new cheese and sour cream dressing.

CABBAGE SALAD IN GRAPE JELLY

- 1 tablespoon plain, unflavored gelatin
- ¼ cup cold water
- 1 cup grape juice, heated to boiling
- ⅓ cup sugar
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- ¾ cup shredded cabbage
- ½ cup chopped celery
- ¾ cup pineapple chunks, well drained

Soften gelatin in cold water and dissolve in hot grape juice. Add sugar, salt, and lemon juice. Chill until mixture begins to thicken. Add shredded cabbage, celery, and pineapple chunks mixed together. Turn into molds and chill. When set, unmold and serve on lettuce beds.

CHEESE AND SOUR CREAM DRESSING
[For cole slaw]

- ½ cup thick sour cream
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon paprika
- ¼ teaspoon celery seed
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon vinegar
- ¼ cup grated cheese

Combine ingredients and beat one minute. Chill and serve mixed with shredded cabbage or over any green salad.

TRY SHORTCAKE OF MUSHROOMS AND SLICED EGG

Sliced eggs and sautéed mushrooms in creamy white sauce, served between halves of golden crusted biscuits, make a dish that's tempting enough to appeal to the most meager appetite. Serve this shortcake with a garnish of parsley and a generous helping of buttered lima beans.

EGG AND MUSHROOM SHORTCAKE.
[Serves Six.]

- 6 baking powder biscuits
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 3 tablespoons flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1½ cups milk
- 4 to 6 hard cooked eggs, sliced
- 1 cup sautéed mushrooms

Melt butter, stir in flour to form a smooth paste. Add salt and milk and cook over low fire until slightly thickened, stirring constantly. Add sliced eggs and mushrooms. Split hot biscuits, cover with creamed mixture, and replace tops of biscuits, adding more creamed mixture. Garnish with parsley and serve.

Invite "Ice Cream Men" to the Children's Party

"Ice cream men" for the children's party are easy to make and require no artistic skill. Put a ball of ice cream on each dessert plate. Use raisins for the eyes, currants for the nose, and a piece of candied cherry for the mouth. For a hat place a small butter cookie at a slant on the top of the head.

PEACH WAGON WHEEL WILL TAKE YOU OUT OF THE CULINARY RUT

Peach Wagon Wheel is a fitting name for this bread and fruit dessert, for the strips of bread, topped with peach slices, are attractively arranged like spokes of a wheel in the buttered baking dish. The dessert is equally good when served warm or well chilled.

When fresh peaches are used increase brown sugar in the recipe to one-half cup.

PEACH WAGON WHEEL.
[Serves Six.]

- 4 tablespoons butter
- ⅓ cup brown sugar
- 6 slices bread
- 2 cups sliced canned peaches
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- Grated rind ½ lemon

Cream butter and sugar together; spread thickly on slices of bread. Remove crusts and cut each slice lengthwise into quarters, making 24 strips in all. Arrange 12 strips, wheel fashion, in bottom of buttered casserole. Add peaches mixed with lemon juice and grated rind. Top with remaining 12 strips, arranged in the same manner with sugared side up. Bake in moderately hot oven [375 degrees] about 40 minutes, or until brown. Serve warm or chilled with lemon or cream sauce.

It's STRAWBERRY RUSK-CAKE time. Simply butter HEKMAN'S Dutch Tea RUSK, heat in oven, then cover with crushed berries and juice, and top with thickly whipped cream. Sweeten to taste. Deliciously different.

Ready for South Shore Horse Show

Looking at Hollywood by Ed Sullivan

Paragraphs.

Hollywood, Cal., May 29.—On the "Boom Town" set, Director Jack Conway gives the cast a recess. . . . Gable and Tracy sprawl heavily in camp chairs. . . . "What did you think of Montgomery joining up as an ambulance driver?" asked Gable. . . . I told him that it was a wonderfully brave action. . . . "You said it," exploded Gable. "I always knew Bob had plenty of 'heart'." . . . That is more than most of the movie colony were wise enough to recognize: I remember 'way back when Montgomery was ticketed as a radical out here.

Just recently, there was another demonstration of this shortsightedness. . . . Melvyn Douglas was recommended for a majority in the intelligence division of the California National Guard. . . . Some Californians protested the nomination, on the grounds that Douglas, consciously or not, had been a member of radical organizations out here. . . . His radicalism, probably, was in his efforts to relieve the distress of the "Okie" migrants who drifted to this state.

Probably no glamor girl of the colony got so many invitations to attend the opening of the Hollywood race track as Norma Shearer. . . . She turned them all down without offering any reason. . . . The real reason being that it was the birthday of Irving Thalberg.

Each three weeks, young Mickey Rooney mails out a check for $5. . . . The entire transaction is cloaked in the greatest secrecy. . . . Mickey mails the check to a local handicapper who sits up far into the night poring over the form charts of the horses. . . . Last week, in 18 races, Mickey's man picked 16 winners, and the other two finished in the money. . . . He called up Mickey the next day, apologized for the two horses that didn't win!

Ann Sothern, now a hot shot at M.-G.-M. as a result of the box office success of her "Maizie" characterizations, was originally signed by M.-G.-M. years ago at the solicitation of Paul Bern and then released. . . . In other words, Ann was discovered by Jean Harlow's husband, and then came back years later to click in the character that had been created for Jean Harlow, who would have been "Maizie" had she lived.

In "Four Sons," Director Archie Mayo sets up one scene that is surefire. . . . Eugenie Leontovich, as the mother of the two boys who have been killed, is visited by the Nazi officer, who expresses his regrets stiffly and asks: "Is there anything more I can do for you?" . . . Leontovich says: "No, you have done enough."

Anne Morgan's American Friends of France, operating in Hollywood thru Mrs. Charles Boyer and Mrs. Basil Rathbone, is petitioning the movie celebs for immediate cash to carry on the wonderful work. . . . A footnote explains the price of things needed: One month's salary for nurses, $50 per month . . . small cars, $500 . . . a complete social center for refugees, $2,200.

One of the best pictures I've seen recently is "Brother Orchid," starring Edward G. Robinson. . . . It is an adaptation of a Richard Connell story and audiences will enjoy it because the story is different from the regular movie fare. . . . Most amusing situation: When gangster Robinson appears in the city streets garbed as a Floracian monk. . . . Most amusing line: Night club owner Ann Sothern's description of her nervous anxiety to Robinson: "I can't even sleep in the afternoon." . . . Ralph Bellamy turns in one of his swellest performances, and the sequence with Bellamy doing his bird calls is a show stopper.

Dear Mr. Sullivan: I want to express my appreciation of your action in calling the attention of the major studios to the plight of foreign movie correspondents in Hollywood. Of course, some of them have other jobs to tide them over, but those of us who were completely dependent upon connections with our native countries have a tough time. I was, until the invasion, a correspondent for Norwegian papers. Sincerely,

INGEBORG BARTH.

The George Melford who is playing the rôle of John Taylor, Mormon leader, in "Brigham Young" once was famous as a director in the silent days. . . . So when the company started arguing about the most talented film stars of all time they asked Melford for his opinion. . . . Only two of the moderns are represented in his selection of the 10 all-time greatest: 1, Rudolph Valentino; 2, Bette Davis; 3, Wallace Reid; 4, Robert Donat; 5, Ernest Torrence; 6, George Fawcett; 7, Marie Dressler; 8, Gloria Swanson; 9, Alice Joyce; 10, Percy Marmont. . . . Chief indictment of Melford's judgment will be his failure to have named Charlie Chaplin. . . . How he missed Chaplin I'll never know.

Melford says that Torrence and Fawcett were the greatest character actors the movies ever have boasted. . . . Both of them were great, but I'd rate Donald Crisp above both of them, and it is my guess that C. Aubrey Smith was better than one of them, and possibly both of them.

Sawyer's BAKER BOY CRACKERS

Black for Day, White at Night, Fashion Edict

BY REA SEEGER.

Black by day, white by night, materials the same, thin crisp net, marquisette, or filmy chiffon, summer costumes stage the best showings in all the shops and stores in town. Thin airy blacks have become a typical American costume for sultry heat waves. Cool them with frosty white, accent them subtly with pale amber beige or with water colors in pink, lime green, or old blue. Such a dress can be changed to suit the whim of the hour.

Black lace is used tellingly for flattery around a neckline, for effective insertions, for concentric bands around a skirt or in softly tied bows. Chantilly patterns are the most popular, plain net mesh second, and the coarser patterns used for daytime dresses in heavier silk crêpe or shantung.

Slightly stiff organdy is a dateless sheer arriving each summer to be used as the tailored or dressmaker type costume. This is another of the summer sheers that have been specially processed to stay unwrinkled from dawn till dark. Thin China silk looks opaque, but it is thin and airy to wear.

This is the kind of silk that makes those deceptively simple daytime dresses with gathered skirts, loosely gathered shirtwaist or peasant blouse-tops with choice of long sleeves or short. Summer thin jersey in cave black is another sophisticated material for an all-purpose summer dress. . . . It's used with eye catching success as a background costume for chalk white jewelry or striking costume accessories, and the huge floppy cartwheel hats that shade eyelines when the sun blazes.

New white chiffon evening gowns are ready, comparatively simple affairs with shirred drapery, with swathed Grecian folds or tucked. Many of the newest dinner dresses are cut with brief sleeves and shirred shoulder bands. All skirts flutter because of great width and clever cutting—gores, panels, and single or double circles as well as the peasant gathered band belts. Thin summer crêpes and jerseys, a lot of cotton nets and marquisettes all designed in the same manner, complete the showings now ready for the shopping rush.

Fashion photograph . . . fresh, cool and colorful accents for all-white or dark, solid color street outfits are such duets as this prim checked gingham bag and shell shaped brim hat. The top of the head is exposed; the brim can be worn off the face as illustrated or pulled down over the forehead for a sunshade. Carry-all bag is of the same material as the hat. Similar hats and matched bags are obtainable in all the current collections of summer accessories.

Allendale Alumnae to Give Banquet for L. E. Myers Tonight

The Allendale Alumnæ of the Allendale School for Boys at Lake Villa will give a banquet in compliment to Lewis E. Myers at the Blackstone hotel tonight.

Mr. Myers, chairman of the board of the Allendale school, formerly was president of the Chicago board of education and at present is chairman of the Salvation Army board, chairman of the Chicago Civic Hospital association, and director of the Boys' Club Federation of America.

Among the guests expected at the banquet are Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Sunny, Dr. and Mrs. Theodore Proxmire, Richard S. Folson, Mr. and Mrs. David Dangler, Mr. and Mrs. Edison Dick, Mr. and Mrs. Rensselaer W. Cox, Dr. and Mrs. Hugo Fisher, and Raymond A. Thompson, present director of the Allendale school.

Accents for Summer Garb

Brimmed hat without a top crown and matching big bag combine are telling cool summer accents for either all white or dark street clothes. Shell shape brim can be worn either as an off the face frame or pulled down over the forehead for a sun shade. Similar bag and hat combines will be found in the accessory collections now on display.

Thru the LOOKING GLASS

As always happens at this season we're beseiged with inquires about permanent waves. As a precaution against looking wilted when warm weather really arrives—which it should do with a bang any minute now—nine women out of ten with straight hair have a spring permanent.

What they want to know is what is the best for their hair. Unfortunately it's a question we can't answer when we haven't the foggiest notion of what kind of hair they have. Neither do they, incidentally. So the answer is obvious: the kind of wave they need is determined by the texture and condition of their hair—and the good operator is the best judge.

Remember that the wave itself is only one item you pay for; you pay for good equipment and an operator's skill, and the cheap permanent isn't apt to be a bargain.

If your hair is difficult have a test curl. And if your hair is in bad shape don't expect that a permanent will cure it of all its ills. It can't possibly. Postpone the permanent and have some treatments that will bring it back to par.

Treatments are a good investment in almost every instance. Hair that has been waved for years, several times a year, and that is seldom brushed is hardly receptive to more heat. Brushings, oil treatments and scalp massage as a prepermanent venture increase your chances of a successful wave, and truly beautiful hair.

What it all boils down to is this: Don't be casual about your choice of a permanent. Shop for a good one—and if your hair is in poor condition don't blame the operator if it's a failure.

Soldiers' Field Religious Rally to Draw 100,000

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

More than 100 regional and nationwide evangelistic groups, working in coöperation with the annual convention of The World's Christian Fundamentals association meeting this week at the Stevens hotel, will hold the first "Let's Win America for God." mass meeting in Soldiers' field, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Harry G. Saulnier, head of Pacific Garden mission, chairman of the mass meeting committee, predicted yesterday that 100,000 persons will enter Soldiers' field for the service. The principal speaker will be Gov. Luren D. Dickinson of Michigan. Gov. Dickinson, who is 81 years old, has been known for many years as a Sunday school teacher, temperance advocate and church leader. He was a member of the general conference of the Methodist church which recently met in Atlantic City, N. J. Gov. Dickinson's subject will be "America at the Crossroads."

In announcing the meeting Mr. Saulnier said preparations had been intensive for the last two months. Hundreds of churches have been visited by the committee's "flying squadrons." These squadrons have become well known during the last decade in preparation for annual Chicagoland Easter Sunrise services which have been headed by Mr. Saulnier since their beginning.

The program for the mass meeting includes special music by massed choirs of 3,000 voices led by bands from the city's 18 Salvation Army corps, the Moody Memorial church male chorus, and the Wheaton college quintet, J. Stratton Shufelt, chairman of the music committee, said a preliminary hour of sacred music will prelude the opening of the main program.

"At least 10,000 persons will come by automobile caravan from points outside of the Chicago area," Mr. Saulnier said yesterday. "Quotas assigned to Chicago churches assure at least 90,000 more. One 24 hour prayer meeting and another lasting 11 hours were held in preparation for the event."

The mass meeting was described by Mr. Saulnier as the beginning of a religious revival. After the meeting evangelists of various communions will launch special services which will reach thousands of communities thruout the nation. Other speakers at the rally include Evangelist Bob Jones of Cleveland, Tenn., R. G. Le Tourneau, Peoria manufacturer, Dr. Paul Rood of Los Angeles, president of the World's Fundamentals association, and the Rev. Frank Mangs of Stockholm, Sweden.

Good Morning!

Our lives are being just full—and delightfully so!—of Anna Neagle this week-end! We have her on the screen—[AND IN PERSON—for today only] over at the Oriental, and tonight, don't forget! she will appear on "Fifth Row Center" over W-G-N in the audience studio, in a brief version of "Irene," with Burgess Meredith. At this time she will wear the famous "Alice Blue Gown" in which she looks so devastating—as the film "Irene" will prove to you.

[Miss Neagle and her producer, Herbert Wilcox, will appear on the Oriental's stage three times at the following hours—11:30 a. m., 2 p. m., and 9:30 p. m. She will wear the blue gown, sing the "Alice" song, and dance the waltz each time.]

This picture is the adaptation of the stage musical comedy, "Irene," presented in Chicago in 1920 and featuring Irene Dunne in her first stage appearance. It is a lightsome comedy drama with music, sympathetically and gayly played, crisply dialogued, cunningly directed and lavishly staged and costumed.

It depicts the story of Irene O'Dare, who, from the station of humble—no, anything but THAT!—upholsterer's assistant, becomes a famous mannikin, darling of society, and the exquisite bone of contention between two rich and handsome scions of proud houses . . . which wins her? AH—I shall never tell you that!

There may be more versatile stars than Miss Neagle, but I have yet to meet them. When you see "Irene" remember that the title rôle is being played by the same girl who so memorably gave us "Nurse Edith Cavell" and "Queen Victoria."

The male leads are in the competent hands of Ray Milland and Alan Marshal, and May Robson gives one of her grandly etched characterizations as the heroine's peppery and adoring Irish grandmother. Other players entered creditably into the spirit of the thing.

I know you'll enjoy the picture and DON'T forget to listen in on W-G-N tonight during "Fifth Row Center."

See you tomorrow.

By Evelyn Holmes

May 31, 1940.

Universal Day: All the 5-days in this month have been turbulent, for May is the fifth month, and we are in a 5-year. Today is no exception. Unexpected happenings get publicity.

Year Ahead: A year of tremendous upheavals and changes is in store for those born today. They may expect an erratic and highly explosive year. Make the most of public contacts and try to make practical use of the brilliant ideas that flash thru. It can be stimulating and lots of fun.

Names: There is a very social nature expressed by those whose first name begins with the letter "U," or who have the letter as the first vowel in their name. They are interested in a good time, likely to be in authority, and have a strong urge to express themselves in one way or another.

Understanding Child Makes Handling Easy

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.
[Copyright: 1940: News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

There are lots of very definite rules for managing children about which I could write you, and do. But there are other angles, less definite ones, which to me are equally important.

Not only equally important, but equally practical. After all, practical advice is the kind which brings results. And often, advice which deals with some big aspect of young human nature, something fundamental that exists in them over a long period of time, is very practical, for the reason that an understanding of this part [or phase] of a child's nature throws light on his behavior from day to day. It acts as interpreter for us.

For instance, when we know that our adolescent son or daughter is experiencing tremendous physical changes, and rapid ones, too, we can deal wisely with many of his or her ways that are tied up with this fundamental thing.

When we digest the idea that our baby, just walking, must learn thru the sense of touch various facts about material things [roughness, smoothness, cold, warmth, even the feeling of weight] then we don't call him naughty when he handles our things, nor do we constantly stop him.

When we know what the change from home life to school life and its contacts means, we account for the changes in our 5 or 6 year old. When we see swagger and a little cheekiness showing, we interpret it as our baby turning into a big boy, and "feeling his oats," aware of a sense of new physical independence. So, too, instead of being horrified at your 7 year old's bad words, you discover the harmless reason for them.

Or, knowing that a child's curiosity is an all-encompassing thing, in fact, a necessary thing which is responsible for his getting to understand the world he lives in, we are not horrified when his questions touch the subject upon which we have become so "touchy," sex. We realize that, to him, there are no such artificial barriers, no such taboos, as exist for us. So we answer him clearly, fitting the words we use, and the amount he can take in, to his understanding.

Try to gain as much fundamental knowledge of your children as you can. When this column is general, instead of specific, don't put it aside. Basic understanding may give you the key to what baffles you in a dozen small ways.

"When Your Child Brings Home 'Bad Words'" is a leaflet of interest to parents, teachers and nurses. Send a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Address Mrs. Gladys Bevans, the Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill.

Pattern for Sports Costume

MISS' SPORTS DRESS.

For tennis, golf, and other outdoor activities you need a dress that allows you physical freedom and skin exposure for sun tanning. For its public appearances this same frock needs a bolero jacket to make it presentable. This pattern provides for both requirements, and it's a simple pattern to use. The neckline in front is heart-shaped, and in back is square and low. A slide fastener does duty down the back to just below the waistline. Stitching adorns the shoulder lines and the large pockets, and there's a self-fabric or contrasting belt around the waist.

As for the bolero, it may match or contrast, and is of the type that fits loosely. This costume may be made of any washable silk, linen, or cotton, with plain shades or stripes preferred.

Style No. 2625 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20. Size 16 requires 2⅝ yards of 39 inch material for dress; 1⅝ yards for bolero.

Address orders for Clotilde patterns to Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central annex, NEW YORK CITY, including 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred—wrap carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Be sure to state clearly the number of the pattern and the size desired, and write your name and address plainly.

Massage Is Major Factor in a Shampoo

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.
[Copyright: 1940: News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Today let's indulge in the subject of plain and unfancy business of hair washing.

Let's first dismiss for good and all that ridiculous myth about frequent shampooing harming the hair. Let's put it down as gospel that not one-half the ills to which hair is subjected would exist were washing hair a more frequent practice. I don't care whether it is blonde hair, brunette, or red, or any of the in between shades, your scalp cannot help but be in better condition after a perfect shampoo than before. The hairs that you run your comb thru have nothing to do with the health and beauty of your hair. No, hair beauty is born deeper than that. It is regulated absolutely by the condition of the hair roots and the condition of the scalp.

There is no better way of dismissing dandruff from the scalp than by frequent shampooing. Your particular care of dandruff and scalp condition may require an unguent of some sort, true, but in this event you should be under the direction of some good scalp and hair authority who sees your head personally and is in a position to prescribe for its ailment.

We are speaking of the ordinary head of hair with an ordinary case of dandruff. It isn't the water, the soap, or shampoo lotion as much as the shampoo method, that performs the good work. It's the scalp massaging the hair necessarily gets with the fingers when the soap is being worked in, and the more of this you do, incidentally, the better for your hair. Too, there is the vitalizing effect from the water sprayed on the hair during the shampoo process, and there is the rubbing dry of the hair which further stimulates the scalp. Any scalp stimulating action is bound to be beneficial to your locks. That's why we talk hair brushing so often. There's no better mechanical massage than vigorous brushing, and by vigorous brushing is meant getting down into the scalp and being contented only with such tingling sensation as proves you've dug down deep with brush and arm action.

Is your scalp scaly? Antoinette Donnelly, Tribune beauty editor, tells what to do about it in her booklet "Bring Out the Beauty in Your Hair." Get a copy at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 S. Dearborn street and Tribune Tower. Price, 5 cents. Postpaid, 7 cents.

Husband's Old Sweetheart Is Worry to Wife

BY DORIS BLAKE.
[Copyright: 1940: News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

"We have been married 30 years, and now I have found my husband untrue to me. During our courtship days he used to go around with a girl who lived in the same village as he did then. They corresponded later. Even after our marriage they wrote for a while. She married another man, but now I hear that the marriage turned out badly and she is again alone. Now she is trying to renew her friendship with my mate. I am afraid that she has, to a certain extent. I trusted my husband until I accidentally discovered a postcard she sent him. I became suspicious and found other cards, too. It seems terrible that this woman would try to come between us now, doesn't it? What would you suggest that I do? Mrs. C. S."

Postcards are flimsy evidence of faithlessness, wouldn't you say, Mrs. C. S.? We get your point, of course. They do look like an attempt at a renewal of interest, but you want to be clever in the way you handle this thing. Conscious, as you must be, that the woman in the case was a former sweetheart of your man, you naturally would be inclined to attach significance to any incident in connection with her. You may even exaggerate it. However, your suspicions may have foundation. After all, "other" women don't start sending cards to a married man unless they want to attract his attention. But postcards are pretty public messengers, so it would seem that the affair is in an embryonic stage, to say the least.

It occurs to us that you might nip this thing in the bud if you cultivated the woman again and invited her to your home and treated her, as best you can, as an old acquaintance. Somehow we can't believe that this man of yours, after 30 years of marriage to you, would become seriously involved with another woman. His vanity might be hit with her interest, true, but if you could manage a casual air about it, rather than a tragic one, it would probably stop right there. If you must say something to your man about it, tease him as good naturedly as you can, but don't make a mountain of it.

The Housewife

Most women would like to cut short the seemingly endless task of keeping silver bright. And one way to do this is to use a clever polishing cloth made especially for the purpose. It consists of two cloths sewn together, one being treated to remove tarnish and the other serving as a finishing off cloth. This useful gadget comes packed in a green box and can be used again and again until it wears out. You do not wash it. And you do not use any other cream or polish with it.

EDITH WEIGLE.

The Stage

Jimmy Roland, the endearing youngster who appeared here last fall with Ruth Chatterton in "Tonight We Dance," has now taken over the part of Whitney Day—the next to youngest of the four boys—in the Blackstone theater company of "Life with Father." Jimmy supplants Buddy Buehler, who has gone to the New York company to take the place of a boy who has outgrown his part. Jack Picchietti, the understudy, has also played the part with complete competence on several occasions, and may sometimes alternate with Jimmy Roland in the future.

According to CULBERTSON

"Dear Mr. Culbertson: As just one more bit of proof that there are many ways to skin a cat, I offer the following. It occurred recently in a so-called friendly rubber bridge game:

"The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 diamond	Pass	3 diamonds	Pass
3 spades	Pass	4 diamonds	Pass
5 clubs	Pass	5 hearts	Pass
6 no trump	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

"Perhaps we had better not talk about the bidding which, in your own inimitable way, you probably will say consisted of a series of hops, skips, and jumps. I concede that six diamonds would have been a slightly more logical contract, but I get more kick out of playing no trump, so there!

"West opened the heart queen. I won with the blank king and counted my tricks. In top cards I had one spade, two hearts, five diamonds, and three clubs. The fact that these totaled only 11 did not worry me, since a 3-3 club break—or something—would produce the 12th trick. Besides, I expected one of the dopes I was playing against to discard a club in case he had the suit stopped.

"I ran off five diamonds, discarding a spade from my own hand, then cashed the queen, ace, and king of clubs. To my surprise, East, however, had held on to all of his clubs [probably because they were the only cards above seven spots in his hand] and I would have to look elsewhere for my 12th trick. At this point my hand consisted of the Q-8-4 of spades and the three of clubs, while dummy was down to the A-10 of spades and the A-9 of hearts. It was not hard for me to read West's present holding. He was obviously keeping the J-10 of hearts and two spades, probably the king-jack. While I stewed and brewed and wondered how much abuse I was going to have to take from North for kicking away a sure slam in diamonds, a brilliant thought came to me on wings of song. For a moment I was almost too dazzled to act on it, but I soon recovered. The inspiration was to lead the three of clubs and make West discard!

"You will immediately see, of course, just how devastating my play was. While I was presenting a club trick to East, poor West had to let go a spade or a heart. If he blanked the heart queen I would throw the spade ten and keep the ace-nine of hearts. If he held the heart guard he would have to throw away the spade jack and, in that case, I would blank the heart ace and keep both of dummy's spades. Actually, he chose to discard a spade in the wild hope that East had the spade queen. But East, after taking his club trick, could do nothing to protect his partner. Whichever he returned, a spade or a heart, I was sure to take the balance. What kind of a squeeze do you call this? F. P. L., Chicago."

I do not know that there is any formal name for the type of squeeze described, but it was certainly a cute one, and I hereby congratulate my correspondent on his perspicacity. The contract could have been fulfilled in a couple of other, but not nearly so sensational, ways.

CAPONE'S RETURN STILL IS FAR OFF, SAYS HIS BROTHER

Ralph, Jailed for Night, Tells of Seeing Al.

Al Capone, who is ill at his estate on Palm Island, near Miami Beach, Fla., will not return to Chicago for a long time. This prediction was made last night by his brother, Ralph, who visited him only two weeks ago. Al, he said, is still seriously ill.

Ralph Capone.

Ralph's prediction was made at the detective bureau. He was arrested in a routine pickup outside Wrigley field yesterday afternoon by Sergt. Marshall Pidgeon and locked in a police cell. It was his first such experience in nearly six years.

Protests His Detainment.

At the detective bureau Capone protested his arrest. He said he is engaged in legitimate business with the Waukesha Water company, 116 West Hubbard street, and that he is available to police at all times. Nevertheless, police planned to hold him overnight just in case any authorities wished to question him.

Capone said he visited Al two weeks ago, and that "he's a pretty sick boy." Lieut. Kyran Phelan commented that any one who had spent 10 years in prison, as Al had, would be sick. "I wouldn't say that," replied Ralph. "Probably there are other reasons." He did not amplify the remark, but police presumed he referred to reports that Al is suffering from paresis. Ralph was asked if Al is coming back to Chicago.

"I don't know," said Ralph. "The doctor told him to be quiet down there for at least a year. He might come back to visit his mother, but it'll be a long time."

Ralph's Earning a Living.

Capone also told of his own activities. He said his business was poor but that he was earning a living. He was carrying $250 when he was arrested. He admitted times weren't like the prohibition days. That money, he confessed, was "no good." All he got out of it, he added, was a prison sentence for income tax evasion. He was freed in February, 1934, after serving two and one-half years.

Al was released from federal prison last November after he had served seven years of a 10 year prison sentence for income tax fraud. He was hospitalized at once and has been under medical care since.

CONVICT MINER AS SLAYER; GIVE HIM LIFE TERM

Benton, Ill., May 30 (AP).—A Circuit court jury today found John Oakes, 53 year old West Frankfort miner, guilty of murder in the Palm Sunday slaying of John Colbert, a roomer in the Oakes home, and fixed his punishment at life imprisonment.

Judge W. Joe Hill did not pass sentence pending disposal of a motion for a new trial which Defense Counsel S. M. Ward indicated would be filed.

Colbert was fatally beaten and shot in the Oakes home March 17 and his body was recovered five days later from a shallow grave in a Perry county cornfield. Oakes pleaded self-defense, charging he struck Colbert only after being attacked with a gun. He asserted Colbert became enraged when ordered to move to other quarters.

The jury deliberated 18 hours before agreeing on the sentence.

OPEN HEARINGS MONDAY ON 500 PAROLE PLEAS

The state parole board will open public hearings Monday on more than 500 applications for parole. Cases from Joliet and Stateville penitentiaries and the State Reformatory for Women at Dwight will be heard at the Joliet penitentiary. Menard and Pontiac cases will be heard at those institutions. Following the public hearings, subcommittees of the parole board will hold daily sessions until the cases are concluded.

GUARD WITNESS IN FRAUD TRIAL AT SOUTH BEND

South Bend, Ind., May 30 [Special].—A police guard has been placed at the home of Paul Lechner, a chief witness for the state in the trial of J. C. Weer, former city street commissioner, and Jay S. Rose, secretary-treasurer of Schuyler Rose, Inc., who are charged with cheating the city on supplies allegedly never delivered.

Lechner, purchasing agent for the Rose corporation, building supply and coal firm, said he received threats after he testified he cashed a city check payable to the corporation, turned the funds over the Rose, and credited the accounts of three former city officials with $438.

The accounts credited were, J. Warren Freyermuth, nephew and secretary of former Mayor George W. Freyermuth, $199.75; Edwin W. Hunter, former city attorney, $145.40, and J. C. Weer, $92.87, according to Lechner.

The police watch was posted at the request of Deputy Prosecutor James E. Keating.

Held in Dixon on Charge of Stealing from Partner

Dixon, Ill., May 30 [Special].—Robert Conger, 35 years old, of Wausau, Wis., formerly a partner of Hal Mateer of Dixon in an electrical appliance business, was held in the Lee county jail here today on a charge of embezzling between $1,200 and $1,500 of the partnership funds. He was arrested in Chicago.

NAME EX-WIZARD IN MAIL FRAUD, TRUST CHARGES

Accuse Evans of $90,000 Swindle in Georgia.

Rome, Ga., May 30 [Special].—Hiram W. Evans, former imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, and John W. Greer Jr., former state highway purchasing agent, were indicted by a federal grand jury today on eight counts charging mail fraud and violation of federal anti-trust statutes.

Three firms also were named in the indictment charging anti-trust violations. They are: American Bitumuls company, of San Francisco; Shell Oil Company, Inc. of St. Louis, and Emulsified Asphalt Refining company of Charleston, S. C.

The indictments charge that Evans obtained agreements with, and was made sole Georgia representative of the firms named. Under terms of that agreement, the indictment Evans fixed the prices which the firms should bid on state contracts.

Charge $90,000 Excess Fee.

During 1937 and 1938, the government charges that the state of Georgia bought nearly four and a half million gallons of emulsified asphalt from firms owned or represented by Evans.

A price of $456,427 was paid for the asphalt, $90,000 more than would have been the case had there been competitive and independent bidding, the government charges.

The indictments then charge that Greer, now clerk of the state house of representatives, assisted Evans by refusing to notify qualified bidders of proposed purchases by the state. When such independent bids were made, the indictment says, Greer suppressed them.

Caught on Own Story.

The jury further charges that Evans received a commission on every gallon of emulsified asphalt purchased by the state thru the companies he represented. The transactions detailed in the indictments are those which Evans revealed to the state house economy committee when it was investigating highway purchases last year.

The three firms were not accused in the fraud indictment, but were named on the anti-trust charges.

ARMY COLONEL'S WIFE NO. 1 GETS 12 YEARS FOR SLAYING OF NO. 2

Columbia, S. C., May 30 (AP).—Judge G. Duncan Bellinger sentenced Mrs. May Walker Burleson of Galveston, Tex., to 12 years in the penitentiary today. She was convicted of manslaughter in connection with the slaying of the second wife of her divorced husband, Col. Richard C. Burleson of the United States army.

The judge, in passing sentence, said he would have given the 51 year old defendant the maximum of 30 years permissible under the verdict if the jury had not recommended mercy. "This was an assassination," he said of the slaying, in which Mrs. Burleson shot Mrs. Isabel Knowlton Burleson in the back as she sat in a hotel cafeteria March 8.

PLUNGES 9 FLOORS TO DEATH; NOTE BARES SHORTAGE

Chalmer McCalla, an insurance agent, was killed yesterday when he leaped or fell from a ninth floor window of the Parkway hotel, 2100 Lincoln Park West. His body crashed into an alley at the rear of the building.

McCalla was about 45 years old and lived at 7652 Calumet avenue, with his wife, Wilma, and two daughters, Luella, 22, and Betty, 15.

In McCalla's pocket police found a note addressed to his wife, stating that he was short $711 in his accounts, and asking her to "make a home for dad," presumably his father, who lives somewhere in Ohio.

COLLAPSES IN HOME; DIES.

Albert Hanke, 21 years old, operator of a small trucking concern, collapsed yesterday in his home at 5833 North Paulina street and died later in the St. Francis hospital, Evanston. Death resulted from natural causes.

An Electric RECORD PLAYER

Realizing that many families have no means of playing records, an electric record-playing attachment has been provided by the manufacturers at bare cost of production. This record-player, attached to your radio, enables you to play all sizes of records through the loudspeaker of your radio. The attachment is completely electric, needs no winding and operates on AC current. No similar instrument has ever been offered before at so small a cost.

STILL AVAILABLE

When Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun," "Clouds" and "Festivals" are released for distribution today there will be a total of five symphonies you can get at Distribution Headquarters—Schubert's Symphony No. 8, Beethoven's Fifth, Tschaikowsky's Nutcracker Suite, Mozart's G Minor Symphony as well as the current Debussy release.

HOW THIS GREAT MOVEMENT WAS ACCOMPLISHED

You get the opportunity to take twelve of the world's greatest musical masterpieces into your home at an almost incredibly small price due to the following achievements:

(1) Some of the world's greatest orchestras and conductors waived their royalties.

(2) America's foremost music manufacturer reduced charges and profits to what that organization considers the barest practical operating minimum.

(3) America's foremost newspaper promotion organization, the Publishers Service Company, organized and conducted the campaign for many of the nation's most prominent newspapers and music societies.

(4) In Chicago, Publishers Service is conducting the campaign in behalf of the Chicago Society for Music Education, a nonprofit organization which will receive the sums from the sale of records, and after payment of all charges, will distribute the remainder among the four cooperating Chicago musical organizations, the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, the Chicago Opera, Ravinia Festival and Chicago Women's Orchestral Association.

(5) One symphony or symphonic masterpiece is distributed on Friday of each week. Distribution of each symphony continues throughout the campaign as long as the supply lasts.

HOW TO GET YOUR RECORDS

1. Come for, or send for, your symphonies at MUSIC APPRECIATION DISTRIBUTION HEADQUARTERS, 65 East Lake Street and 14 North Franklin Street. The office will be open each day from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. Requests by mail will be filled in order of receipt.

2. At regular weekly intervals each of the 12 symphonic masterpieces will be released. The first symphony, Franz Schubert's No. 8 in B Minor, as well as Beethoven's Symphony No. 5 in C Minor, Tschaikowsky's Nutcracker Suite and Mozart's Symphony No. 40 in G Minor, and Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun," "Clouds," and "Festivals" are now available. Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger" and Prelude to "Parsifal" will follow on June 7th, etc., until all of the educational masterpieces provided in the campaign have been made available to the public. Notice of release date of each symphony will be printed in the public press.

3. You receive each symphony, which consists of either three or four double-faced 12-inch records, for a total payment of $1.69. THIS IS NOT FOR EACH RECORD but for the COMPLETE SYMPHONY, all three or four records, six or eight sides, which comprise each symphony. The two symphonies which consist of five records (ten sides) require a payment of $2.18 for the entire symphony of all five records. The Cesar Franck D Minor Symphony, on account of its length, is divided into two units, each unit consisting of three double-faced 12-inch records, and the cost of each unit is the same as for any other three record group. A quantity of de luxe records, known as Philharmonic Transcriptions, and inclosed in record albums designed for each particular symphony, is available at a slightly higher price. These are the first pressings from the same masters enclosed in albums and featuring a portrait of the composer on the label of each record. There is little, if any, difference in playing quality. Sales tax should be added to the foregoing prices.

4. An electric Record-Player attachment, which enables these records to be played through the loudspeaker of an average radio, is available for those who require a means of playing records, and is available with your first or any succeeding symphonic unit. The player can be obtained for $4.75. A more elaborate instrument, the Symphonic De Luxe Model, inclosed in a walnut-finished case, is available at a higher price. If you wish delivery of your symphonies by mail, add 25 cents for shipping charges for each symphony. Add 50 cents for shipping charges if you wish a Record-Player shipped to you. Sales tax should be added to price quoted above.

5. Every effort will be made to supply as many symphonies as are required. In order to avoid disappointment and to enable us to have a sufficient supply on hand, please fill in and mail the Reservation Form. It does not obligate you in any way.

SHAW SCORES 3D VICTORY IN 500 MILE RACE

REDS BEAT CUBS TWICE, TAKE LEAD; SOX LOSE PAIR

LEE FAILS, 4 TO 2; DROP 2D GAME IN TWELFTH, 9-8

Rizzo's Hit Decides Long Battle.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The Cubs, much against their wishes, were forced to act as stepping stones for the Cincinnati Reds' return to first place yesterday. The champions recaptured the lofty perch by taking the front half of the Memorial day bill, 4 to 2, while the Brooklyn Dodgers were losing to the Giants. Then the Reds strengthened their grip as leaders by combining a 12 inning 9 to 8 triumph over the Cubs with another Dodger defeat.

John Rizzo.

The first half of the show was reeled off hurriedly before 30,828, principally because Paul Derringer, an old hand at wringing the Cubs' necks, refused to show his favorite enemy much mercy. A few hits here and there didn't disturb him except when Billy Nicholson hit a homer with a mate waiting, and Paul rode to victory on the strength of what happened to Bill Lee. Lee was knocked out in the second inning, making the sixth time this year he has failed to finish what he started.

Charley Root Falters.

The Cubs could have had the decision in the second game if old Charley Root, making his second start, hadn't wobbled after his pals had fixed him up comfortably. Twice they tied the score in the early innings by belting Whitey Moore, the Reds' starting pitcher. Then they gave Milburn [Lefty] Shoffner, who replaced Moore, three run treatment in the seventh, mainly because of a double by Jim Gleeson. Root was routed in the next inning and before Claude Passeau could quiet the Reds they had set up an 8 to 8 tie which wasn't disturbed until the twelfth.

The same inning that brought Passeau into the show brought forth Joe Beggs, the ex-Yankee, and for five innings he held the Cubs to four hits. Joe dodged entrapment after a double by Gleeson and an intentional pass to Hank Leiber had been recorded with none out in the ninth. He escaped similar trouble after Bobby Mattick and Passeau had singled with one out in the eighth. In this incident Mattick got as far as third only to become the second out when he tried to score on Stan Hack's tap to Billy Werber.

Rizzo's Hit Wins.

Passeau yielded a single to the Reds when they tied the score in the eighth after he had relieved Root. In the next three innings Claude kept three Red hits widely separated, but he gave up a pass to Ival Goodman in the twelfth and the champions cashed in on the gift. Goodman was forced by Frank McCormick and the latter went to second on a single to left by Bill Hershberger, after which Werber popped out.

Then Johnny Rizzo, who had fanned three times while Root was pitching but had grabbed the eighth inning single off Passeau, settled everything. He singled to left and McCormick carried home the deciding run.

The Reds actually had to put on two rallies to get their three runs off

The Gold Star.

The years it has hung in the window
Have conspired to fade it some,
But I venture to say 'twill hang there
For many more years to come.

The once bright red of its field is pink
And its fringe a duller shade
Than when it was first placed there to show
The sacrifice a son had made.

The gold of its star is brilliant!
Tho its center, which once was white,
Is gray with the grime and dust of years,
That star is still shiny bright.

Quite often I have wondered why
It hasn't tarnished and grown dim,
Since trembling hands hung the emblem
In fond memory of him.

But today I saw his mother's eyes
And I needed not to be told
The reason for that untarnished star—
Her heart is in that bit of gold!

INDIANS DEFEAT SMITH, 3 TO 1, IN OPENING BATTLE

Lee Is Beaten in Second by Same Score.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., May 30.—The White Sox, who are doing the best they can, this afternoon dropped their second double header in three days, yielding to the second place Cleveland Indians, 3 to 1, in the first game, a painful exposition of wasted opportunity, and dropping the second by the same score.

The latter game featured an early Indian splurge, headlined by Hal Trosky's eleventh home run.

The Sox made six hits off Al Smith in the first game and five off Al Milnar in the second.

Lefty Edgar Smith, tho he did not have to vie with Bob Feller, as on two previous occasions this year, got the same old kind of offensive support usually attendant upon his superlative efforts in the opener. The only Chicago run was a homer by Mike Kreevich in the ninth inning.

Lee Is Shaky at Start.

Thornton Lee, who possesses the only victory the Sox have achieved over the Indians, started nervously in the second game, the Indians making two runs in the first inning and one on Trosky's homer in the third. After the third, however, the Cleveland offensive consisted of a walk to Lou Boudreau, with one out in the fourth. It was three up and three down for the Indians the rest of the way.

The Sox run in the second game was made with two out in the fourth, when Luke Appling walked and scored on Larry Rosenthal's double.

Despite a drizzle which kept up thru both games, following hard morning rains, 18,162 paid to see the double Indian triumph.

FIRST GAME

In the first game the Sox reached new heights of futility. Before the Indians had reached first base, Joe Kuhel had tripled in the first inning with one out and had been doubled at the plate, Appling had reached third and Rosenthal first with one out in the second inning to be sunk in a double play, and Mike Tresh had reached second and Bob Kennedy first with one out in the third, a threat which also ended in a double play.

The Indians left a runner on base in the third, and the Chicagoans were jolted by a fourth double play in the fifth.

All of this happened before the second Indian had reached base. Then, with two out in the home fifth, Rollie Hemsley doubled and Ray Mack scratched a single which scored Hemsley. This established a 1 to 0 status which extended thru the Sox eighth, tho Rosenthal tripled with one down in the seventh and was out at the plate because he forgot to slide.

After the Indians had scored two runs with two out in the eighth, Kreevich got his homer, just an inning too late for excitement purposes.

SECOND GAME

The Indians weren't so slow getting production started in the second game. Lou Boudreau opened the home offensive with a single to center and stole second. Jeff Heath flied to Rosenthal, but Ben Chapman walked. Trosky dumped a pop fly back of third for a single, Boudreau scoring. Chapman reached third on the hit and Trosky took second when Kennedy threw toward home while in a sitting position. Beau Bell was given an intentional pass, loading the bases. Ken Keltner forced Trosky, Chapman scoring, and Frank Pytlak popped to Kuhel.

Trosky opened the third with his homer, a 350 foot shot into the right field stands. Bell rolled to Kuhel, then Keltner singled to right but was

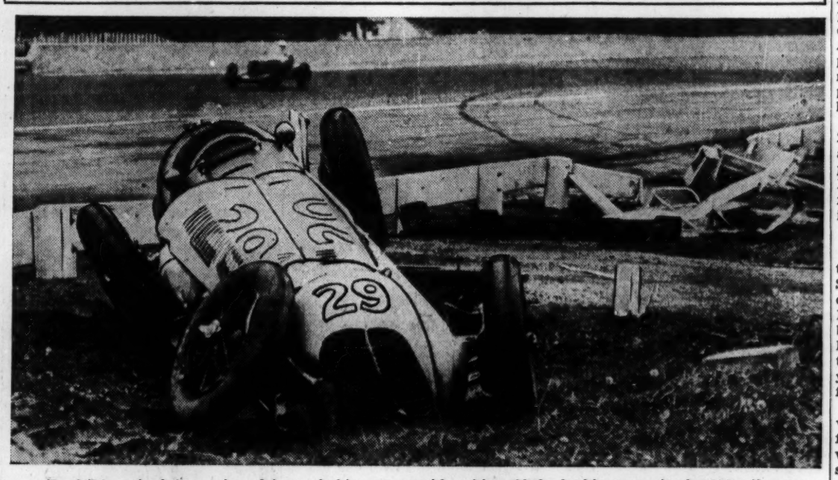
A Thrill Packed Day for 143,000 Speed Fans



Raul Riganti of Argentina, driver of this car, considers himself the luckiest man in the 500 mile automobile race in Indianapolis yesterday. Altho his Maserati turned over twice in the most spectacular crash of the day, he escaped with minor injuries. The race was won by Wilbur Shaw of Indianapolis for his third triumph in four years. The crowd was estimated at 142,000. [Acme Telephotos.]

20,000 See Mucho Gusto Win Peabody Memorial at Crete

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Mucho Gusto stretched his eight year old legs in another stake winning effort before a holiday crowd of 20,000 yesterday at Lincoln Fields. After going to the post as the 2 to 1 favorite in the $5,000 Francis S. Peabody Memorial handicap, he broke on top, led all the way and finished a length and a half ahead of Shot Put. Gray Jack was third, half a length farther back. Then followed Inscoelda, Nightland, Manie O'Hara and Manymor.

The soft track, drying out gradually after many rainy days, was kind to the hoofs of old Mucho Gusto. When he came out from the paddock, with bandages on his hind legs and a leather support on his right front ankle, his followers were reminded that he isn't as young as he used to be. He's four years older than he was the last time he won the Peabody Memorial and a year older than when he led the way home in the Lincoln handicap, biggest event of last season's Lincoln Fields meeting. But when Starter Bill Hamilton pressed the switch, Mucho Gusto answered the bell like an old fire horse.

Oros Drives Him to Front.

Jockey Johnny Oros, alert for the signal, drove Mucho Gusto to the front as the gates flew open. Shot Put and Inscoelda, mere youngsters by comparison, were caught flatfooted by the speed of the old timer on the dash for position on the clubhouse turn.

Around the bend they went, Mucho Gusto opening up a lead of two lengths, while Shot Put was carried out and shuffled far back. As they moved down the back stretch, Inscoelda maintained her contending position and Nightland came up to run beside her.

Approaching the stretch, Inscoelda put Mucho Gusto's lead to a length—but then she tired. Nightland gave way also but still old Mucho Gusto went galloping on. Then it was Shot Put who launched a drive in the stretch and Gray Jack, too, was closing fast along the rail. Mucho Gusto still kept on running. Holding his youthful rivals safe, he crossed the finish line galloping freely while the crowd shouted applause for his popular victory.

Mucho Gusto Pays $5.80.

Mucho Gusto returned $5.80, $3.20 and $3.20 in the mutuels. His time for the mile and a sixteenth was 1:50 3-5. Shot Put, the 3 to 1 second choice, returned $4 and $3 for place and show. Gray Jack, which was quoted at a little less than 8 to 1, paid off at $4 for show.

Daily double players cashed their tickets at $382.40 after Honey Roll and Mighty Miss had won the second and third races. The long price was due to the betters' indifference to Honey Roll, which got to the post at odds of nearly 22 to 1. His colleague was quoted at 4 to 1.

The fans could hardly be blamed for being wary of backing Honey Roll, because this unreliable performer hadn't won a race since 1938—and he had scored only once even then. This was his first start since the Sportsman's Park meeting last fall.

Other Substantial Prices.

The handsome double was sandwiched between two races which returned substantial prices, Aglow paying off at $12.40, $5.20, and $4.20 in the first and Noble Count yielding $16, $7, and $4.80 in the fourth.

Another thumping long shot scored in the seventh race. This was Highthorne, a 3 year old colt which paid $50.40, $18.80, and $7 in the first victory of his career. He led all the way in this six furlong dash for horses of the $2,500 class, finishing three lengths ahead of Flying Bonnet.

MAYS PLACES 2D AND ROSE 3D BEFORE 142,000

Rain Slows Field at 375 Miles.

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Indianapolis, Ind., May 30.—Wilbur Shaw of Indianapolis won the 28th annual 500 mile automobile race today, repeating his victories of 1937 and 1939. The only other driver to win three times was Louis Meyer of California, who scored in 1928, 1929, and 1933.

A crowd estimated at 142,000 saw a heated duel in the first 375 miles between Shaw and Mays, another Californian, for the lead, as well as for lap prizes. For the last 125 miles, a cold drizzle eliminated competition. A yellow warning flag reduced the pace to 85 miles per hour and the racers were prohibited by rules from passing those in front. Shaw coasted home with the first place money.

The time of the winner was 4 hours 22 minutes 31.16 seconds and the average for the 500 miles was 114.277 miles per hour. Shaw's average in winning last year was 115.035 and the track record, set by the late Floyd Roberts in 1938, was 117.200.

It's a Two Car Race.

The whole race was a match between an Italian Maserati driven by Shaw and an American built supercharged eight piloted by Mays. The Maserati is owned by Mike Boyle, boss of Chicago's electricians' union; Mays' car is owned by Meyer, who retired as a driver after his wreck last year with only a few laps to go for a fourth victory.

After Shaw was given the checkered victory flag officials waved the red flag halting the race, because of the weather. The other eight money positions were awarded as follows:

THIRD—Mauri Rose, Columbus, O.
FOURTH—Ted Horn, Hawthorne, N. J.
FIFTH—Joel Thorne, Tucson, Ariz.
SIXTH—Bob Swanson, Los Angeles.
SEVENTH—Frank Wearne, Pasadena, Cal.
EIGHTH—Mel Hansen, Los Angeles.
NINTH—Frank Brisco, Chicago.
TENTH—Harry McQuinn, Indianapolis.

Weather Spoils Bids for Records.

The pace of the two leaders was breaking track records until the drizzle fogged windshields and greased the pavement. Thereafter it was a monotonous, slow grind, dull to every one except Shaw, who was rolling up more prize money at every leisurely circuit of the 2½ mile loop.

In the most spectacular spill of the day Raul Riganti, champion of Argentina, hit the concrete retaining wall on the southeast turn of his 24th lap. His car, a new Maserati, purchased by popular subscription in his native land, swerved and rolled over. He was thrown clear. At the hospital it was reported that his face was cut and his back bruised.

Eastern Driver Injured.

Riganti's new Italian machine was one of three eliminated by hitting a wall during the first 118 miles of the race.

On his 32d lap, Tommy Hinnershitz of Reading, Pa., came down the home stretch before a mile of grandstands with smoke pouring from a flat right rear tire. He tried to stop at the pits, hit the wall, and spun into the middle of the track. He managed to keep the car upright and there were no close followers to complicate matters. Hinnershitz suffered a fracture of the right arm. On his 47th lap, Ralph Hepburn of Los Angeles spun and hit a wall near the press pagoda. He was not hurt but his car was forced out.

Nineteen of the original 33 starters remained when the red flag was hung out, stopping the race.

Winner Gets $25,100.

Shaw, 37 years old and married, collected $20,000 from the speedway for first place, plus $5,100 in lap prizes for a total of $25,100. Mays took $10,000 as second prize plus $2,300 in lap money. The only other driver to win lap money was Rose—$300. He also got $5,000 for third place.

Other speedway prizes are: Fourth, $3,500; fifth, $3,000; sixth, $2,000; seventh, $1,800; eighth, $1,600; ninth, $1,500, and tenth, $1,400.

Mays Takes Early Lead.

For the starters who did not finish in money positions, a consolation purse of $13,100 is shared. Each gets $500 for starting and more, depending upon the number of laps he completes.

Mays, from the pole position, took the lead in the first lap, closely tailed by Shaw, who started as No. 2 in the first row. They retained these relative positions for the first 73 miles.

On the 34th swing around the two and a half mile track, Shaw pushed his dark brown mount ahead of Mays in approaching the southeast turn. The Californian at that time had won $1,400 in lap prizes.

On his 73d lap Shaw stopped at the pits for two and a half minutes for a change of tires and for fuel, surrendering the lead to Mays after taking $2,900 in lap prizes. On returning to the track the Hoosier was in fifth place, a lap behind the leader.

Wilbur Opens Up.

Shaw then began to sprint, giving his car a full throttle. On the 83d lap he was in third place, having overtaken Horn and Thorne. Mays and

HUBBELL YIELDS ONE HIT; GIANTS NIP DODGERS, 7-0

Score 8 in 12th Inning to Win 2d Game, 12-5.

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 30 (AP).—The New York Giants swept a double header from the Dodgers today, 7 to 0 and 12 to 5, and knocked Brooklyn out of the National league lead.

Carl Hubbell.

In the first game old Carl Hubbell came within one hit of pitching a perfect game. Johnny Hudson singled in the second inning, but a double play erased him and the southpaw faced only 27 batters. He gave no walks and no Dodger except Hudson reached first.

That was how close Hubbell came to equaling his no-hitter against Pittsburgh in 1929.

The second game was a riotous 12 inning engagement in which the Dodgers used 20 players and went down battling even after the Giants bombarded eight runs across in the twelfth. Scores:

CUBS WILL REST TODAY; DODGERS FOES TOMORROW

The Cubs have nothing to do today except think over their recent past and hope for an improved future. They go back to work tomorrow against the Brooklyn Dodgers.

A half hour before the start of yesterday's first game the field was so well draped in fog that players in the outfield were barely discernable from the grand stand. A slight shift of the wind lifted the curtain.

Stan Hack tore home with a run in the opening inning of the first game, but after reaching the plate discovered it didn't count. With one out, Hank Leiber walloped a low liner into center and Hack started for the plate from second. Harry Craft caught Leiber's smash and Hack was doubled.

Ival Goodman, Reds' outfielder, finds the path to second smoothed for him as Billy Herman, Cubs' second baseman, drops the ball in third inning of first game on Wrigley field yesterday. Shortstop Bobby Mattick of the Cubs covers the base. The Reds took the opener, 4-2, and the second, 9-8, in 12 innings.

Wood Jr. Hurls No-Hitter as Yale Nips Wesleyan, 11-1

New Haven, Conn., May 30 [Special].—Joe Wood Jr., of Yale pitched a no-hit game today in beating Wesleyan, 11 to 1. On a mixup in signals in the ninth inning Bus Burdett, substitute catcher, allowed one of Wood's fast ones to drift past him and Stan Kay raced home from third with Wesleyan's only score. Only one other Wesleyan player reached second base—Gree, who got there on a steal. Wood struck out eight batters. He also doubled twice, driving home four runs, and stole two bases, once crossing the home plate on a double theft. Only one Wesleyan player drove the ball out of the infield. Wood's feat stands alongside that of Frank Robertson, who in 1899 blanked Princeton without a hit in an annual game here.

Reds Defeat Cubs Twice; Regain Lead

Lee in the second inning. F. McCormick beat out a bunt and Lombardi singled. This threat was pretty well cleaned up when Werber grounded into a double play, leaving F. McCormick on third. The Reds simply started all over, getting some encouragement from Lee's wildness. The big fellow filled the bags by walking Rizzo and Myers. Derringer singled to right to score F. McCormick. Craft lined a two bagger to the fence in left center, Rizzo and Myers going home and Lee going away. Vance Page broke up the attack by fanning Frey.

Altho Page was nicked for only four hits in his better than six innings of labor, he couldn't hurdle an obstacle tossed in his path by Mattick. The latter picked up Rizzo's grounder in the fourth and gave it such a fancy heave that it bounced into the enemy dugout, Rizzo taking second. He scored eventually on Craft's triple to center after two were gone.

Double Plays Hurt.

The Cubs got nothing from a pair of hits off Derringer in the first inning and didn't hit again until the fourth. This time they were able to show results. Gleeson singled to left with one out and after Leiber had fanned, Nicholson sent his No. 3 homer over the right field barrier.

The Cubs had Derringer a bit worried in the last two innings, but he had the solution in each case. Hack and Herman singled with one out in the eighth. Gleeson rolled into a double play. Hits by Leiber and Russell put two on with one out in the ninth. This also was smothered by a twin killing on a grounder hit by Hartnett.

SECOND GAME

The opening inning was so strenuous for Root that he didn't catch up with the first out until after he had been damaged by three batters. Craft opened with a single and sprinted to third on Frey's double down the right field line. Goodman singled over short, but only Craft scored. Root got himself pretty well clear of the jam by unseating F. McCormick and Hershberger, but Werber singled to right and Frey scored.

The Cubs wasted no time getting into a 2 to 2 tie. Hack led off with a double to left and Herman walked. Gleeson provided the customary sacrifice and Leiber sent the two fellows the rest of the way by singling to center. Nicholson fanned and Russell fouled to Hershberger.

The Reds broke the tie in the third. Frey singled to left, was bunted to second by Goodman, and sent home on a single by F. McCormick. Two more hits in the fifth piled up two more runs for the champions. Moore singled and was forced by Craft who scored when Frey tripled. Frey scampered home on Goodman's long fly to Leiber.

Gleeson Doubles in Pinch.

Knotting the count in the Cubs' fifth began with Todd's double to left. He hiked to third on Mattick's long fly to Craft, and scored when Root singled. Hack doubled to put Root on third and both scored on Herman's single to left center. This was where Moore resigned in favor of Shoffner.

Hack beat out a grounder to Myers with one out in the seventh and it touched off what looked like the decisive blast. Herman walked and Gleeson doubled to right center, Hack and Herman scoring. Gleeson sneaked to third on the throw to the plate. Leiber was purposely passed and Collins, who batted for Nicholson, sent a fly to Rizzo, Gleeson scoring.

Root started the eighth by giving passes to Goodman and F. McCormick. The liberality proved the old boy's undoing. Hershberger singled to center, Goodman scoring and Root retiring. Passeau induced Werber to ground into a force play at second, but F. McCormick scored. Rizzo then singled to right, Werber going to third, whence he carried home the tying run on Myers' fly to Gleeson.

YANKS, RED SOX DIVIDE 2 GAMES BEFORE 82,437

Champions Win 4 to 0 and Then Lose 11 to 4.

New York, May 30 [Special].—The third largest crowd ever to cram a ball park—82,437—bulged the Yankee stadium to capacity today as the Yanks and Red Sox halved a double header. Behind the two hit pitching of Red Ruffing the Yanks took the opener, 4 to 0. But in the second game 14 hits brought victory to Boston, 11 to 4.

Red Ruffing.

Forty-five minutes before game time ticket booths closed. Fans, some with lunch baskets, scoured the stands for seats. Not finding any, they perched on the ramps, runways, and stone aisles. A few couldn't even find standing room and battled their way to the club offices, where they received refunds.

President Ed Barrow estimated more than 20,000 were turned away.

Only twice has the attendance been topped. On Memorial day, two years ago, 84,041 watched the same two teams in a twin bill. Before that, in 1928, 83,353 watched the Athletics and Yanks at the stadium. Today's paid attendance was 80,875.

For seven innings, Ruffing breezed thru the Red Sox batting order, not yielding a hit. With none out in the eighth, Joe Cronin drove a clean single over Frank Crosetti's head for the first hit. Scores:

An Indian Runs Fastest Marathon of All Time

Salisbury Beach, Mass., May 30 (AP).—Ellison [Tarzan] Brown, Westerly, R. I., Indian, ran the fastest marathon of all time today while outdistancing Johnny Kelley of Arlington, and 51 other rivals in the fourth annual Lawrence-to-the-sea race. Brown finished about 300 yards ahead of Kelley, runner-up for the third straight year. Brown completed the 26 miles, 735 yards in 2 hours 27 minutes 29 3-5 seconds. That time was 59 seconds under the previous marathon record which Gerard Cote of Verdun, Que., established last month in the Boston A. A. race, and 5 minutes and 14 4-5 seconds faster than the course record made last year by the late Pat Dengis.

The baseball school featuring Babe Ruth and Rogers Hornsby as chief instructors, will open for registration tomorrow at 8:30 a. m. in Mills stadium and Shewbridge field. Opening classes will be held in the parks in the afternoon. Original plans called for registration and opening day drills in Soldiers' field.

caught stealing, and Pytlak flied to Kreevich.

The Sox Get One.

The Sox busted thru after two were out in the fourth. Appling walked and scored on Rosenthal's third hit of the afternoon, a double to left.

The first error of the afternoon gave the Sox a break in the sixth, but they couldn't capitalize. Kuhel walked and Kreevich grounded to Keltner. Mack, overzealous for a double play, missed the bag and both runners were safe. Taft Wright was called out on strikes, Appling grounded to Trosky, and Rosenthal flied to Chapman.

Eric McNair opened the seventh with the third Chicago hit, a single to center, but was forced by Tom turner. Lee singled to left, Turner stopping at second. Kennedy forced Lee, and Kuhel grounded out to Mack.

Kreevich got to first at the start of the eighth on a bad throw by Keltner but Wright popped to Boudreau and Appling and Rosenthal both whiffed. Turner added the fifth Chicago hit in the ninth.

White Sox Get a Day's Rest for Boston Series

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., May 30.—The White Sox will arrive in Boston at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning for the opener of their second eastern trip on Saturday.

There will be a single game Saturday, a double-header Sunday, and a single game Monday. So far this year the Sox of White and of Red have met three times. The Chicagoans split a two game series in Boston just a month ago, and lost the only contest the weather man would tolerate in Chicago, a 10 inning affair dominated by Jimmy Foxx.

Umpire George Moriarty was here to celebrate the eighth anniversary of his brawl with the White Sox. He umpired at third base in the first game and at first in the second.

Jack Knott is scheduled to pitch the seaboard opener. He will be shooting for his third victory and hoping to dodge his third defeat.

CLEVELAND TEAM WINS FROM MILLS GIRLS BY 17 TO 0

Rapping out 16 hits the Erin Brews of Cleveland defeated the Mills team, 17 to 0, in Mills stadium last night. Pitchers Eva Skryzdlewski and Elva Brugger were victims of the Brews.

In Shewbridge field Evelyn Paeth tripled with two teammates on the bases in the eighth to give Hydrox a 3 to 2 victory and break up a pitchers' duel between Marge Startz of Hydrox and Ann Koenig of the Koch Furnitures, Cleveland. In a league contest the Raab Tailors won from the Rockolas, 8 to 4, on the winners' field.

Tonight the Rockolas move into Spencer field, 4200 North Central avenue, to meet the Rivals in a league game, while the two Cleveland teams reverse the order of their games last night—the Erin Brews moving to Shewbridge field to meet Hydrox and the Koch Furnitures invading Mills stadium to play the Mills. All games start at 9 p. m.

591,016 See Memorial Day Sports Events

New York, May 30 (AP).—The American sports public celebrated Memorial day by turning out in the hundreds of thousands for favorite athletic diversions.

The annual 500 mile Speedway race in Indianapolis attracted a throng of 142,000 in spite of threatening weather.

Seven major league baseball games divided up 237,828 customers, including the third largest single crowd in history, 82,437 in Yankee stadium.

Another 211,188 spectators jammed the seven leading horse racing tracks now operating. Of this number 46,500 were at Suffolk Downs in Boston, 41,801 at Belmont park outside New York City, 20,000 at Chicago's Lincoln Fields, 44,000 at Hollywood Park, Englewood, Cal.; 20,000 at Delaware Park, Stanton, Del.; 20,887 at the Detroit Fair Grounds, and 18,000 at Fairmount Park, Collinsville, Ill.

The grand total to see the chief sports events of the day—major league baseball, the Indianapolis race and horse racing—was 591,016.

Old timers recalled a racing turnout of 57,000 at Belmont, paid and free, on Memorial day in 1908, but today's turnstile count was a modern record for the metropolis.

In Brooklyn the size of Ebbets field was all that limited the attendance at the Dodgers-Giants game to 34,548. This included some 300 standees.

The major league figures:

Stanton, Del., May 30 (AP).—Blensign, Guy Bedwell's undefeated colt, galloped to his third straight victory at Delaware Park today, winning the five furlong $4,000 Dover stakes by a length and a half over Joseph E. Widener's Misty Isle.

Before an overflow crowd of 20,000 the son of Blenheim and Design, with Jockey Al Shelhamer up, broke second and moved out in front in a driving finish.

Misty Isle earned place money in a photo finish with W. E. Boeing's Sun By. Fantastical was fourth with Pete Jr., Sun Thrush, Scout Time, and Overdawn Strung along behind. The winning time was 1:01. Blensign's victory was worth $6,575.

FOG BLANKETS YACHT COURSE; ONLY SIX FINISH

Twenty-three of the Chicago Yacht club's racing fleet attempted to compete in the first race of the season off Belmont harbor yesterday, but thick fog spoiled the show. Only six craft finished officially. Colleen was the only R class sloop to be identified by the regatta committee and Svek was the winning Tumlaren class sloop. The Eagle and Star class yachts became lost in the fog and their race was declared no contest.

John T. Pirie II. won the second Star class race of the Sheridan Shore Yacht club, as he had won the first last Sunday, in his sloop Gemini. Glider II., the Bingham-Clay-Floyd syndicate entry, was runnerup.

Jack Holbrook sailed his B class Frostbite dinghy to victory in the last eight races of the Columbia Yacht club's third spring series.

The Great Lakes Cruising club's fleet of sail and power yachts will race tonight and tomorrow to Kenosha, Wis., the first time in local yachting history that boats have sailed to that harbor. Sail yachts from Jackson park, Grant park, and Belmont harbors will meet at 8:30 o'clock this evening off Navy Pier for the start. Motor yachts will depart from Belmont harbor at 1:15 p. m., tomorrow.

MICHIGAN BEATS MICHIGAN STATE IN FINAL, 5 TO 4

East Lansing, Mich., May 30 [Special].—Good relief pitching by Lyle Bond gave the University of Michigan a 5 to 4 victory over Michigan State today in the Wolverines' final game. Jack Barry, Michigan's ace, started the game, but in the sixth inning gave way to Bond, who throttled the Spartan attack for the remainder of the game. Michigan's victory gave it a record of 10 won against 12 defeats for the season. Score:

$26,800 Race at Belmont Goes to Eight Thirty

New York, May 30 [Special].—Eight Thirty won the 54th running of the $20,000 added Suburban handicap, turning the tables on Third Degree, winner of the Metropolitan handicap last Saturday as turf records tumbled at Belmont Park today. The crowd of 41,801 set a modern record for attendance at New York tracks. The betting total of $1,436,729 for the day set a new record. The previous high mark, established last Saturday, was $1,187,899.

Eight Thirty, owned by George D. Widener, was first by a length over Can't Wait, from Myron Selznick's stable. Third Degree, owned by Donald P. Ross, was third by four lengths. Eight Thirty was a well played second choice in the betting and returned $8.60, $6.50, and $3.60 across the board. Third Degree and Hash, Greentree stable entry, was made the favorite in the mutuel pool.

Bet $277,646 on Suburban.

A total of $277,646 was wagered on the Suburban, a new high total for a single race at a New York track.

The race grossed $26,800, of which $19,850 went to the winner.

Eight Thirty, carrying top weight of 127 pounds, finished in 2:01 3-5 over a fast track. Jockey Harry Richards handled the 4 year old son of Pilate and Dinner Time. The official fractions for the race were: :24, :46 3-5, 1:09 4-5, 1:35 1-5, and 2:01 3-5. The time was a second and three-fifths slower than the record set by Whisk Broom II. in 1913.

Masked General set the early pace, closely accompanied by Can't Wait. The two were running as a team with Third Degree and Eight Thirty well off the pace. This front running duel proved of most advantage to Eight Thirty. At the head of the stretch Masked General dropped out of contention, and then Eight Thirty and Third Degree came on with a rush.

No Stopping Eight Thirty.

Can't Wait drove on, but there was no stopping the Widener star as Richards sent him romping home. He drove past Can't Wait and was going best of the lot at the finish. Can't Wait easily was able to stand off the challenge of Third Degree.

Long shots thrilled the big crowd in most of the day's races, form being upset sharply.

Slievereigh, former flat runner, captured the steeplechase at $15.30 for $2 in a jumping event that set a new betting figure for a race of its kind. The betting total was $79,010.

Following the main event W. L. Brann's Pictor was the winner of the Ballot handicap. This Chesapeake stakes winner scored decisively over Cockerel, with Maecaro third. Carrier Pigeon ran out of the money.

Iowa, Minnesota Play with Big 9½ Title at Stake

Iowa City, Ia., May 30 [Special].—The Iowa baseball team will close its 1940 season here tomorrow and Saturday in contests with Minnesota.

The Hawkeyes, defending title holders, are eliminated from the Big 9½ race, but by defeating the Gophers twice can give the championship to Northwestern and Illinois. An undisputed championship for Minnesota depends on a double victory.

Co-Captains Jim George and Harold Haub and Erwin Prasse, Andy Kantor and Fred [Hooker] Hohenhorst will play their final games for Iowa.

George was named the conference's most valuable player in his sophomore year, and last year led the circuit in hitting. Prasse has a .404 average at present and, with Kantor, forms one of the finest infield combinations in the conference.

Haub, last year's leading hurler in the conference, has won 10 of 12 contest this season.

'I'll Be Back After No. 4 in 1941'—Shaw

Indianapolis, Ind., May 30 (AP).—Begrimed and tired, but "so happy I don't know what to say," dapper Wilbur Shaw of Indianapolis pulled into the bullpen today at the end of 500 miles over the Indianapolis speedway oval, some $30,000 richer and with his third Memorial day title tucked away.

Shaw spiked a report that today's race was his last.

"Retire? Absolutely not," he declared. "I'll be back next year shooting for No. 4."

The Missus Is There.

With photographers' flashguns popping and radio and newsmen struggling to get near him, Shaw's attractive brunette wife, Cathleen, pushed into the inclosure.

"Hello, baby," the grinning champion shouted. He kissed her soundly, transferring a large grease smear to her upper lip.

"Kiss her again, Wilbur," the photographers asked and Shaw obliged.

"It really was a grand race," said Shaw. "I've never seen fellows so nice in my life. I'm certainly happy this thing turned out the way it did."

Mrs. Charles E. Morgan, Shaw's mother, then pinched her son's leg vigorously to attract his attention.

Kisses His Mother.

Shaw kissed her, too, and warned, "Look out, mom, you'll get burned on that exhaust pipe."

A member of Shaw's pit crew swabbed his face and neck with a damp towel, removing some of the grime, while the happy driver smoked a cigaret.

Shaw said he believed he was less tired than after last year's winning race.

"That was probably due to being in better condition," he declared. "For the first time in years I actually slept the night before the race."

SHAW TAKES 3D 500 MILE RACE BEFORE 142,000

Rose were No. 1 and 2, respectively.

On his 99th lap, just before reaching the halfway mark, Mays stopped at the pits for 1 minute and 13 seconds, changing his rear tires and refueling. This put Rose in the lead at 250 miles and Shaw second. Four laps later Rose had to stop for two new tires and more fuel, Shaw resuming the lead.

At the halfway mark the leading Rose's average was 118.244 miles per hour. This was well below the track record of 120.893 set last year by Jimmy Snyder of Chicago, who later was killed in a midget race in East St. Louis, Ill.

300-Mile Record Falls.

At 300 miles, with Shaw back in the lead, a new track record for this distance was set. Here the Hoosier had averaged 118.397. The previous record, by Snyder in 1938, was 117.627. Mays was running second, a lap behind, with Horn running third two laps behind Shaw.

The signal to reduce speed was given after Duke Nalon of Chicago had skidded off the track, escaping injury, however.

The team of Frenchmen, on leave from the army tank corps—Rene Lebegue and Rene Dreyfus—alternated at nursing their Maserati on the sharp turns. They gunned their machine on the straightaways, but lost so much time on the unaccustomed angles that they dropped from two laps behind at the 50 mile point to nine laps behind at 400 miles.

Rain a Break for Shaw.

The light rain, while unwelcomed by the spectators, was good fortune for Shaw. For lap after lap at the reduced pace he continued to roll up prizes, having won a total of $5,000 in these special awards at the 400 mile point. At 375 miles he had refilled his tanks, and the leisurely 85 mile an hour gait conserved his fuel.

The average for the 400 miles was 116.664 m. p. h. The track record for this distance remained at 117.723, set by Roberts when he won the race in 1938. This year's time for this distance was better than last year's, however, when the pace was retarded in its late stages to clear the track of a three car crash which killed Roberts.

Kelly Petillo of Los Angeles, winner of the 1935 race, met with mechanical difficulties in another of his attempts to repeat his victory. He was eliminated by an oil leak on his 129th lap.

Olympic Trials in Los Angeles Are Abandoned

Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic committee, yesterday said that the Olympic track trials July 12-13 in Los Angeles have been abandoned because it was "unlikely that Olympic standards of competition could be met."

Brundage said that when plans to hold the trials were made, even tho Finland was unable to go thru with holding the 1940 games, that he had insisted the meet must attract the pick of American track and field stars. It became apparent, however, he said, that many stars would be out of training by mid-July and that a representative field could not be guaranteed.

"A vote by the 13 members of the American Olympic track and field committee on the proposal indicated uncertainty as to the class of competition," Brundage said. "When it became unlikely that we could expect the best of our athletes, the meet was called off.

Kenneth L. [Tug] Wilson, Northwestern university athletic director and chairman of the American Olympic track and field committee, said the vote showed "only a slight majority" for holding the event.

WAR ON DRIVING LICENSE FRAUDS PICKS UP SPEED

State and County Officials Join in Campaign.

The office of Edward J. Hughes, secretary of state, and prosecutors in Cook and neighboring counties joined yesterday in a campaign to end the fraudulent use of state driver's licenses. It was disclosed Wednesday that hoodlums, arrested for violating state traffic regulations, demanded that their licenses be accepted as bond, as required by statute, and then failed to return for trial.

Then, by telling the secretary of state's office that they had lost the licenses, they could purchase duplicates for 50 cents each. This would enable them to avoid paying a fine or being sent to jail.

Law Permits Use as Bond.

Don Forsyth, general supervisor of the auto license department in Hughes' Springfield office, said the law permits driver's licenses to be posted as bond on state charges of speeding, running stop signs, improper headlights, parking on state highways, and other minor infractions. The licenses are not acceptable in cases of reckless and intoxicated driving and manslaughter.

"An inquiry will be conducted immediately among all justices of the peace and other courts in Illinois in which traffic cases are heard," Forsyth said. "We will try to determine if they are holding licenses where defendants have failed to appear for trial and duplicate licenses have been sought.

"The courts are required to notify the secretary of state's office when the motorists do not return for trial after posting licenses."

In Cicero, where the license fraud was discovered and an investigation begun by the Chicago Motor club, police now file charges of violating local traffic ordinances against offenders instead of invoking the state traffic law.

Promises to Block Racket.

Wilbert F. Crowley, first assistant state's attorney of Cook county, said a canvass will be made by his office among justices of the peace in Cook county and prosecutions will be begun in cases where motorists posted licenses as bond and did not return. Comments of other prosecutors were:

Russell W. Keeney, state's attorney of Du Page county—No such cases have been reported to me. But an inquiry will be made among justices of the peace and action will be taken where necessary.

Samuel Shapiro, state's attorney of Kankakee county—My investigation will begin at once. I am ready to prosecute if we turn up such cases.

Charles Blim, assistant state's attorney of Will county—A conference will be held in a day or two to start the inquiry in this county. All the justices of the peace will be asked to report on what driver's licenses they are holding.

GOV. TOWNSEND NAMES INDIANA DEFENSE BOARD

Indianapolis, Ind., May 30 (AP).—An "emergency defense" committee was appointed today by Gov. M. Clifford Townsend to advise the governor on state preparedness and to coördinate civilian activities with federal and state defense programs.

Representatives of business, labor, industry, agriculture, war veterans, women's groups, radio, and the press were named members of the committee. The governor listed as the committee's immediate problems:

1. Supervising Indiana participation in the plans to train civilian air pilots.
2. Investigation of organizations or individuals soliciting funds in behalf of national defense or war relief.
3. Acting as a clearing house for civilian programs to be coördinated with federal and state agencies.
4. Determining the policy of the state toward alleged subversive activities.

15,668 Get Maximum $30 Pension Grant in May

Springfield, Ill., May 30 (AP).—The state division of old age assistance reported today that 15,668 pensioners received the $30 maximum award in Illinois this month. This number, Superintendent Fletcher C. Kettle said, represented 11.3 per cent of the 137,770 aged persons on the assistance rolls. As legislation to raise the monthly maximum pension award in Illinois from $30 to $40 neared passage in the general assembly Kettle said he was unable to predict how many persons now receiving assistance would be granted larger checks or how many more persons would be added to the rolls.

LEGION WARNED OF 5TH COLUMN IN 1920, SAYS KELLY

Twenty years ago the American Legion spoke for national preparedness and warned against a fifth column in the United States, Raymond J. Kelly, national commander of the American Legion, said last night before 200 disabled war veterans in the Congress hotel. "We were right then and we are right now," he added.

The veterans, who came from Hines and North Chicago hospitals, were guests of the Cook County council of the Legion at its fifth annual Memorial day dinner. Cartons of cigarets were distributed. Chicagoans donated 125 cars to transport the veterans to and from the hotel.

Other speakers were Mayor Kelly, Gordon Beck, manager of Hines hospital; Matthew J. Murphy, national vice commander of the Legion, and George T. Donoghue, president of the park district.

ARGUE LIMITED COURT ELECTION WRIT PLEA TODAY

Judge John C. Lewe of the Superior court today will hear arguments on a taxpayer's suit for an injunction to prevent a limited judicial election next Monday.

The case is over the contest between Edgar B. Elder, a Republican, and George L. Quilici, a Democrat, candidates for a Municipal court vacancy. Six judges are also to be elected to the Superior court and one to the Circuit court. They are unopposed, the only contest being between Elder and Quilici.

Because only one seat is being contested the election commissioners decided, in the interest of economy, to open only 648 of the city's 3,648 precincts. Elder has indicated that he will challenge the election in the courts if it is carried out as planned.

JAPAN TO SEEK VOICE TO SETTLE EUROPEAN WAR

TOKIO, May 31, Friday (AP).—Circles close to the government said today that Japan, highly concerned in the fate of the Dutch East Indies, would demand a voice in any settlement of the European war.

These quarters said they expected a German victory with the question then arising of disposition of the oil, rubber, and tin of the Dutch East Indies.

The Japanese government was pictured as viewing with uneasiness the prospect that these valuable raw materials would be diverted entirely to Germany, cutting off shipments usually going to Japan.

TRACTION LINES PLAN DOUBLING OF BUS MILEAGE

Agree on Extensions of at Least 455 Miles.

Mileage served by buses will be more than doubled in Chicago under the proposed 102 million dollar program for unifying and modernizing the city's transportation system. Bus extensions and substitutions of buses for street cars planned under the eight year program total a minimum of 455 miles. This will boost bus routes to nearly 800 miles, or half the mileage of all the city's surface routes.

These changes were disclosed yesterday by city and transit lines' engineers who have been making plans for transit improvements. Agreement on the terms of a unified traction ordinance, paving the way for the modernization, was reached Saturday by representatives of the city and the transit companies.

Synopsis to Be Ready Soon.

A synopsis of the proposed ordinance, containing a list of the proposed extensions and substitutions, is being drawn up by Philip Harrington, city traction commissioner, and his staff. It will be submitted to the city council's special traction subcommittee on Tuesday.

Ald. James R. Quinn [50th], chairman of the subcommittee, said yesterday that the bus additions will be one of the most important phases of the modernization program. The tentative plan provides for the purchase of 640 buses, 900 street cars, and 550 subway elevated cars in the first three years and additional equipment in the next five years.

"On many streets, buses are superior to street cars," Ald. Quinn said, "because the buses are more economical, quieter, and less obstructive to the free flow of traffic. They are also safer, because they load and unload at the curb and eliminate the need for safety islands. The trend to more buses under Chicago's program is in line with the tendency in other large cities."

Some Extensions Agreed On.

Changes already agreed to by the companies, it was learned, call for 100 miles of local bus extensions, 230 miles of bus substitutions for street cars, and 125 miles of express bus service.

The surface lines and motor coach [bus] company now operate 1,378 single way miles of routes. These include 1,038 miles of street car track and 162 miles of bus routes by the surface lines and 178 miles of bus service by the motor coach company. Bus routes are thus less than 25 per cent of the total mileage at present.

After the agreed changes have been made, however, the new unified company will operate 795 miles of bus routes and only 809 miles of street car tracks.

In addition to these agreed extensions, the city has asked the present companies to agree to add more than 100 additional miles of bus extensions and substitutions, but these requests have not been settled yet, according to engineers.

3 Man Commission Planned.

If the further extensions are still undecided when the ordinance is finally drafted, the question of their installation will be left up to a local transit commission to be set up under the ordinance. The commission, a three man body, will be appointed by Mayor Kelly with approval of the council, and will have broad powers to regulate the new transit system.

The transit commission, Harrington said yesterday, also will determine the priority with which the agreed bus extensions and substitutions are to be made and will have authority to modify the routes if changed conditions warrant this.

Whether the new buses will be trolley buses or gasoline buses or both will be a managerial problem to be worked out by the new company with the approval of the transit commission, Harrington said. The trolley bus, studies have shown, is cheaper to run where traffic is heavy enough to justify installation of poles and trolleys. It is also quieter, has no fumes, and accelerates more rapidly than gasoline buses. Gasoline buses require a smaller investment, however, and are considered preferable on routes where the population growth is uncertain.

IS OPPORTUNITY DEAD? LOOK AT RUTH'S RECORD

Works Way Thru N.U., Heads Senior Class.

BY MARCIA WINN.

For seven months Northwestern university quietly has harbored a phenomenon on its Evanston campus. The phenomenon is Ruth Evelyn Urice, who was elected president of the senior class last November.

Miss Urice is the first girl to hold such a post in the history of the university. She takes it as quietly as they, and prefers to talk, if people must talk of attainments, of her chocolate cake.

Her chocolate cake has won deserved fame, she says. In fact, she contends she owes her college career, which is thickly sprinkled with honors as a pine forest with needles, to chocolate cake, cigarets, and bedspreads. She made the first, distributed the second, and conducted a survey of color and material preferences on the third. These together with a number of scholarships have paid her way thru college.

Ruth Evelyn Urice.

Array of Odd Jobs.

A slight, vivacious girl of 21, with immense brown eyes and dark, wavy hair, she came to Northwestern from Vinton, Ia. Before the first semester was over she had a scholarship. She has had at least one every semester since then. She also has had an array of odd jobs.

Two semesters she earned her room and board by making salads and baking cakes every Saturday morning. One semester she distributed sample packets of powder to students. Last summer she distributed sample packets of cigarets. Altogether, she estimates, she gave away 5,500 cigarets. She doesn't smoke, but practiced painfully until she learned to inhale, "in case the distributor ever offered me one."

She earned a $100 scholarship last year serving as treasurer for her sorority, Delta Delta Delta. She won several cash prizes in the school of speech [she won the senior speech prize Tuesday night, but it was a four volume set of poems], and even won $20 at keeno. The job she liked best, however, was a survey she completed recently for a bedspread company.

Girls Like Pink and Blue.

In this she interviewed 1,000 girls to ascertain the color and type of spread they prefer. They like, she discovered, pink and blue, tufted.

In between she managed to wedge an imposing array of campus offices. She has served as vice president of the Y. W. C. A., co-chairman of the student peace movement, member of the editorial board of the Daily Northwestern, president of the student congress, chairman of proms, fashion shows and roller skating parties, member of the university debating team, member of the president's committee on the state of the university. "It all sounds dull, I'm sure," she apologized, "but it accumulates before you know it."

In addition she will graduate June 15 with honors in history and social science.

"But the only thing I do very well," she says, "is bake chocolate cakes."

PRESIDENT SAYS STOCK MARKET WILL STAY OPEN

Talks with Martin on Price Breaks.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 30.—After conferring with William McChesney Martin, president of the New York Stock exchange, President Roosevelt said today that there is no problem of closing the exchanges, such as was done during the early part of the first world war.

Mr. Roosevelt said that he and Martin talked over the panics of 1907, 1914, 1921, and 1933, and agreed that an excellent way to avoid such panics is to adopt a policy of "keeping both feet on the ground and your mouth shut."

Martin Is Not Alarmed.

The President said that Martin is not unduly alarmed over present market trends. Securities and commodities have slumped under the impact of unfavorable reaction to the Nazi tidal wave. There was some improvement yesterday, however, prior to closing for the holiday today.

There was considerable speculation during the worst part of the market slump in the last few weeks whether the President would exercise his authority to close the exchanges. Thru the Securities and Exchange commission he could close the exchanges for a period of 90 days or suspend trading in any one issue for 10 days. The SEC has adopted a policy of merely watching the markets for signs of manipulation, refusing all suggestions that it relax any of its rules to enable increased support of the market.

Chicagoans See Wallace.

Meanwhile, a group of Chicago Board of Trade officials has been here for conferences with Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace and the Commodity Exchange administration. The Chicagoans, including John G. McCarthy, president of the board; C. D. Sturtevant, vice president, and Fred H. Clutton, secretary, came of their own volition to discuss the future policy on commodity trading.

The Board of Trade and other commodity exchanges recently established minimum prices on grain futures, at Wallace's request, after wheat had slumped more than 30 cents a bushel and corn more than 10 cents in the week ended May 18.

It was learned from officials here that the Board of Trade officials wanted to be sure of agreement on future action. They discussed the possibility of instituting a daily trading limit of 5 cents a bushel in wheat futures as an alternative to the present minimum prices. The daily limit was formerly 10 cents.

Reveal 'Leak' in Decision on Rail Labor Suit

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Railroad executives were discussing yesterday an alleged "leak" in the handling of a Delaware and Hudson labor dispute by the National Railroad Adjustment board. The "leak" was said to have caused the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen to withdraw several cases from the board when the brotherhood learned that a referee employed by the board was considering deciding against the union workers on some points.

Judge Royal A. Stone.

Several of the cases in dispute involved demands for extra wages as damages or penalty where road train crews—crews that take trains out on the railroad—had done some terminal switching—a task usually performed by yard, or switching crews.

Minnesota Judge a Referee.

The situation was brought to light thru an exchange of letters between Royal A. Stone, an associate judge of the Minnesota Supreme court; Robert F. Cole, secretary, National Mediation board, Washington, and T. S. McFarland, secretary, first division, National Railroad Adjustment board, Chicago.

Judge Stone sat in as a referee for the National Railroad Adjustment board for 10 days in Chicago. On the evening of the date in which he had dictated a memorandum giving his position on the dispute, the brotherhood announced that it was withdrawing the cases which he had considered. Judge Stone then was notified that his services as a referee were no longer needed.

Demand Four Days' Pay for Ones

Judge Stone in his memorandum said that a majority of the claims before him asserted "a supposed right to a full day's pay for work requiring from a few minutes to an hour." In one case four days' pay for one day's work was demanded.

Commenting on the objection of the brotherhood to a road crew doing minor switching, Judge Stone said:

"A referee may be pardoned for supposing that no railroad system could operate economically or sensibly without combining two or more services when reasonably demanded by circumstances."

He said that existing rules provide for adequate compensation for conductors and trainmen.

It was reported in railroad circles that Judge Stone's proposed decision might set a precedent in the handling of similar cases—a situation feared by the brotherhoods. The brotherhoods ask penalties in cases where a train crew assigned to one type of work engages in duties carried on by other divisions of railroad labor. They say that they do this to maintain employment.

TREASURY GETS LICENSES ON 3 PLANE MOTORS

Moves to Speed Standardization.

BY JOHN FISHER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 30.—The United States government has obtained manufacturing rights to two of the leading American airplane engines and the Rolls-Royce airplane motors, the best English type, the treasury announced tonight.

This progress report on the program to step up production to an ultimate goal of 50,000 planes annually, was made by Dr. George J. Mead, vice chairman of the national advisory committee for aeronautics. Dr. Mead was recently appointed chief adviser to Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. on the airplane production program.

Mead said that two of the foremost American engine builders agreed voluntarily today to give the government license rights to any of their engines for a period of three years, subject to extension. He did not name the manufacturers.

Aimed to Speed Mass Output.

This gives the government blanket permission to redistribute manufacturing licenses for these engines to other manufacturers if necessary. It is part of the government's recently instituted plan for pooling aviation patents and designs and clearing the way for mass production thru standardization of engines and parts. The government may also apply this technique to other products.

Mead said the manufacturers will be allowed to produce their own types of engines as far as possible. The licenses will be redistributed only if proved necessary to get the desired production, he said.

"The engine problem is an important one and is getting first consideration," Mead said. Expansion of existing production facilities is necessary, he asserted, adding that this phase of the program would include development of new facilities in the middle west. Asked whether Chicago was under consideration for these new engine plants, Mead said that no particular location has been in mind, merely strategic distribution for defense purposes in an area protected by the eastern and western mountain ranges.

Won't "Let Allies Down."

The matter of financing expansion of existing facilities will be discussed with the engine companies next week, Mead said.

"They will have to do double duty because we don't propose to let the allies down," Mead asserted.

While quality will not be reduced in the new engine production program it may be necessary to give up some of the high standards set up by the army and navy, Mead indicated. For instance, he said, there is no need of building motors for these military planes to last 6,000 hours, such as the air lines use.

Concerning the right to manufacture Rolls-Royce airplane motors in this country, Mead said that a real need has been seen for a liquid-cooled 12 cylinder engine and that the Rolls-Royce is the outstanding engine of this type used by the allies. The Germans use a similar type, except that the engine is inverted. In the United States, the Allison engineering division of General Motors has been the outstanding producer of liquid cooled motors.

Plan Fewer Engine Types.

One of the primary aims is to reduce the number of engine types and produce these on a large scale. First consideration will be given to engines of 200 to 400 horse power for training planes so that a sufficient number of pilots can be provided. The next step will be production of 1,200 to 2,000 horse power tactical engines.

Two sample Rolls-Royce motors already have been shipped to Dayton, O., Mead said.

RESEARCH BOARD REPORTS UPTURN IN NEW ORDERS

New York, May 30 (AP).—Increased new orders to manufacturers for the first time since September, 1939, and a checked recession in shipments which began in January were noted in indexes for April announced today by the National Industrial Conference board, a private research bureau.

New business booked by manufacturers last month was 10 per cent above that of March and 21 per cent larger than in April, 1939, the board said. Manufacturing activity was 3 per cent lower than in March.

Manufacturers' inventories, after allowing for seasonal changes, remained the same as in March and 18 per cent above April, 1939.

LONG-BELL LUMBER.

I have a few shares of common and preferred stock of the Long-Bell Lumber company. In noting the daily quotations of the New York Stock exchange I find there appears only a Class A stock for this company. Are the common and preferred shares not listed? I would like a general report on earnings and dividends.—J. A. H.

Answer: The Class A stock of the Long-Bell Lumber corporation is listed on the New York Stock exchange. The common and preferred stocks of its operating subsidiary, the Long-Bell Lumber company, are not traded on any exchange.

Long-Bell Lumber company is one of the world's largest lumber manufacturers. It owns extensive timber lands in Washington, California, Oregon, Texas, Louisiana, and Arkansas. The wholesale department markets lumber thruout the United States and in seven foreign countries. The company also operates more than 50 retail lumber yards in the southwest thru which it sells building materials and other equipment.

Funded debt of the company at the end of 1939 consisted of $1,771,000 in 5 per cent notes due 1945. The company had outstanding 137,778 shares of $5 cumulative preferred stock of $100 par value and 197,683 shares of $50 par common stock. The Long-Bell Lumber corporation owned 100,780 shares of the common stock.

Stockholders of the operating subsidiary have not received dividends since it was reorganized in 1935. Accumulated unpaid dividends on the preferred stock totaled $13.83 a share at the end of 1939.

Substantially increased orders and slightly higher lumber prices enabled the company to reduce its loss in 1939 from that of 1938. Gross profits, net income and earnings per common share in recent years follow:

	Gross profit.	Net income.	Earned per Com. share.
1936	$3,618,000	$419,371	*$2.20
1937	4,389,000	617,805	*0.62
1938	2,206,000	*537,549	*6.59
1939	2,662,000	*91,969	*3.95

*Net loss.

Improvement in the company's operations was manifest in the first quarter of 1940 when net profit was $1,809 against net loss of $234,989 in the first quarter of 1939.

Net working capital of $8,744,669 was indicated in the company's balance sheet at the end of 1939 by deducting current liabilities of $1,236,320 from current assets of $9,980,989. Total assets were $34,864,412.

Incomes Rise Billion in 1st Four Months

Washington, D. C., May 30 (AP).—American wages and other income were $1,147,000,000 higher in the first four months of 1940 than in the same period of 1939, the department of commerce estimated today.

A department statement noted, however, that the rate of increase over last year had been declining since the first of the year.

During January and February incomes were about 6 per cent higher than in the same 1939 months, while for March and April they were about 4 per cent higher.

Wages and salaries made the biggest gain compared with a year ago.

For the first four months, total income from all sources was $23,478,000, the department calculated.

Of this figure, it reported, $14,871,000,000 was paid out in wages and salaries, an increase of $699,000,000; $2,944,000,000 was paid out in dividends and interest, an increase of $152,000,000; $4,703,000,000 was paid out in rents, royalties, and profits from unincorporated businesses, an increase of $248,000,000; and $960,000,000 was paid out in relief and similar payments, a gain of $48,000,000 over a year ago.

Wheat Eases in Dull Trade at Winnipeg

Closing of the Chicago Board of Trade and other United States exchanges in observance of Memorial day contributed to the apathy that gripped the Winnipeg grain exchange yesterday. Small losses were recorded in wheat futures at the end of a dull session.

Offerings were light and buyers hesitant. Only minor transactions were required to cause price fluctuations and quotations closed ⅜ to ½ cent lower.

Export Sales Indicated.

Export sales of about 150,000 bushels in Canadian wheat were indicated by transactions by exporters, but apart from this there was little activity in the pit. Moderate mill buying in oats provided almost the only activity in the coarse grain pit. Mills were credited with taking small amounts of No. 3 and 4 northern out of the cash wheat market while export interests purchased some No. 1 northern.

Wheat exports from Argentine were estimated at 2,755,000 bushels this week against 3,758,000 shipped last week and 3,684,000 cleared during the 1939 week.

FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS FALL WITH FLANDERS

London Shares Hit, Too, by Tax News.

Stocks declined in foreign markets yesterday as a result of German successes in Flanders and prospects of new troubles for Britain and France. The Associated Press reports found stocks sharply lower in London, weaker in extremely light trading in Toronto, mixed in light dealings in Montreal, and weak in Paris, France.

The London market was affected by the double blow of Nazi military successes and increased taxation. Brewery, tobacco, and store shares led the general decline thruout the list.

Extend Profits Tax.

Industrial shares suffered as a result of the statement by the chancellor of the exchequer Wednesday night that the 100 per cent excess profits tax will apply to all trades and businesses from April 1 last instead of only to enterprises engaged in war business.

Exceptions to the decline in London were gilt edged securities and foreign issues. British government issues were steady, with war loans up 3⅛ at 99.

Trading Volume Small.

The Toronto market, besides being affected by events in Europe, lacked its customary New York leadership, due to the New York markets being closed for Memorial day. Volume was the smallest for a full session this year, only about 125,000 shares changing hands.

The Paris bourse was disturbed by fears of Italian entry into the war. Egyptian and Mediterranean shares were weak. French rentes were off 35 to 60 centimes. Rubber stocks were mixed, but oil shares were firm.

Blitz on Farm.

May 30, 1940.

THE destructive power of a bolt of lightning recently was demonstrated on the Du Page county farm. A tall elm tree was the victim. The bolt hit a good sized limb about 30 feet from the ground. From this point down to its base the tree was ripped and torn as if a giant cleaver had been put into action in combination with a charge of dynamite. We found fragments of the shattered trunk hanging on smaller trees 20 to 30 feet away. Fragments of bark were blown 60 to 75 feet. Splinters two feet long were thrust into the ground.

One of the freakish results of the lightning bolt was the formation of a spear like section of wood in the tree trunk. This is still clinging to the base of the tree. It's about two inches wide and easily five feet long. The men on the farm who live near this elm tree say that when the lightning struck it made their homes shake and they rushed to the windows to see if any of the farm buildings had been hit.

Orphan Robin Is Pet.

An orphan robin fledgling which was left alone in the world when its mother was killed now is the pet of one of the farm homes. The mother robin had its nest in an evergreen tree near this home. Several days ago the farm residents noticed that she was injured and couldn't get up to her nest. Upon investigation they found that the bird had several injuries, including a broken leg, and that there were two fledglings in the nest. So the women took the nest, the mother bird, and both youngsters into the home to take care of them. The mother bird died the next day, and one of the baby robins also was too weak to exist. The second fledgling took well to home nursing, however, and is going strong.

The women have got lots of exercise digging up worms for the robin to eat, and after a few days of hand feeding the youngster knows when meal time has arrived. It likes its breakfast promptly at 6 a. m., and if it is late the bird rouses the whole household with its squeals of hunger.

Soon Will Be Freed.

The robin is learning to fly from one chair to another in the room where it is kept, and as soon as it is able to fly a little better it will be released to take care of itself.

Any one who goes near the large pond these days is apt to be called some choice names by the Canada geese. These birds either have families of goslings or are nesting and how the old geese do talk when they are disturbed.

When we visited the west side of the pond this week we didn't walk within 30 feet of the water. But this was much too close for some of the geese. One pair near the fence rushed around on the ground, honked loudly, and made it plain that they didn't care for us. The surprising feature of this demonstration was the behavior of a turkey which we saw near the edge of the pond. Geese rushed past this bird and all but fell over her. But she never moved an inch. She calmly sat under a small tree and paid no attention to the riot being staged by the honkers.

COMING SUNDAY—

Showing Europe's Hotspots

How does Italy fit into the war picture? Can England be invaded? What are the tremendous issues at stake in the battle of the ages?

To give you a clearer understanding of the war's developments, Sunday's Chicago Sunday Tribune will present another special page size map in full color showing Western Europe from Italy to England and from Africa to Norway.

Germany's industrial power—Italy's position at the crossroads—the much-mooted North African colonies—beleaguered Scandinavia—England's danger . . . how these and many other factors affect the conflict now raging will be made plain on this special map which Artist William Wisner has produced for Sunday's Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Be sure to get your copy of this valuable map and save it in order to follow the developments in the war.
